Huddled Under Tree

Kiddies Killed By Lightning

NEW YORK (AP)—Lightning, Queens, when the storm struck a tree in Queens broke.

As it began to pour, 10 children huddled under the tree, looking for refuge under the tree. Three left the spot before the lightning bolt hit the tree.

The four other children were knocked down by the bolt but were not seriously hurt.

Three killed, police said, had been touching the tree when the lightning struck. The children were in a group playing on a field in Forest Park. Wood-

CLEARWATER, Fla. (AP)—Two men and a woman were killed Saturday when lightning struck an umbrella on a crowded ocean beach during a sudden thunderstorm.

Bulletins

PANAMA — Dr. Milton S. Eisenhower arrived in Panama Saturday, his first stop on a goodwill, fact-finding mission in Latin America.

BRICEVILLE, Tenn.—A coal mine roof collapsed near here Saturday, killing three men and injuring three others. One body has been recovered.

FORD, Wash. — A forest fire, crowned by wind gusts up to 40 miles an hour, caused evacuation of three community families and moved to within half a mile of here late Saturday.

LONDON — Somebody who stole a bicycle outside a London pet shop Saturday was in for a surprise. The carrier bag strapped on the back of the bike contained two four-foot pythons.

VICTORIA GIVES PRINCESS BIG WELCOME TO CANADA

A Smile, a Wave: Reward for Cheers

Pleased smile lights the face of Princess Margaret as she turns to acknowledge the cheers and clapping of crowd on Empress Hotel lawns and Government Street. Moment later, Lieutenant-Governor Frank Ross escorted the princess into the hotel and the crowd was soon chanting, "We want Margaret!" (Colonist photo by Bud Kinsman)

Margaret Magnet Swamps Airlines

VANCOUVER (CP)—Airline North Star airliners into service staff and they are handling 20,000 phone calls daily.

A strike which has idled 10 steamships of the Canadian Pacific Railway's coast service for eight weeks was given as one of the main reasons for the rush on air travel.

Cheers Ring Out All Along Route

By PETER BRUTON

Princess Margaret, looking like a gay, smiling young girl in blue, received a royal welcome to Victoria yesterday as she arrived to bring B.C.'s centennial celebrations to a thunderous climax.

The visit, her first to Canadian soil, began with a quiet yet impressive ceremony at Patricia Bay Airport promptly at 10 a.m. as the big silver and red RCAF C-5 taxied to a stop after making the short hop across Georgia Strait from Vancouver.

AT LONG LAST

"It's so nice to be able to come to Canada at long last," Princess Margaret confided to Mrs. George Peakes, wife of Canada's minister of defence.

There was only a small crowd of about 1,000 on hand at Patricia Bay but if this initial welcome from the people lacked noise and spontaneity, Victoria quickly made up for it with a vociferous reception from an estimated 15,000 of all ages who crowded along the 18-mile route to the Empress Hotel.

GOT THERE EARLY

People began congregating at the airport from 8 a.m. onwards, slowly gathering in numbers in front of the air terminal.

By 9.45 a.m. everything was in readiness.

Scarlet-coated RCMP officers patrolled the area.

A 100-man guard from HMCS Naden stood ramrod stiff in front of the Royal Canadian Navy band which, a few minutes before, had made one last practice run through "God Save the Queen."

GUNNERS READY

The saluting battery of four six-pounders manned by the Fifth Independent B.C. Medium Battery (Militia) of Victoria was on the inner field grass at the ready.

And the official welcoming party of dignitaries waited patiently on the tarmac.

Then, flying high and to the east, appeared the princess' aircraft, a big, lumbering plane, its wings gleaming in the sun. Slowly it eased around to make its approach from the north, losing altitude until its wheels touched down gently at 9.58 a.m.

SALUTE FIRED

Immediately the deafening roar of the first of a 21-gun salute crashed and echoed across the airport, and the guns kept firing at 10-second intervals while the C-5 taxied down.

Royal Welcome Spelled Backwards

Princess Margaret got an inside-out welcome to Victoria. The "Welcome Princess Margaret" message strung above government street faced the wrong way. It was designed to be approached from the north. The princess approached from the south as she will in all of her scheduled tours of the city.

Winds Wreck Royal Stand

KELOWNA, B.C. (CP)—The push reviewing stand from which Princess Margaret was to officiate at the opening of Okanagan Lake Bridge here this week, was demolished by high winds Saturday afternoon.

The 15 by 30-foot structure, built on the bridge causeway, was picked up by the 60-mile-an-hour wind and tossed into nearby Mill Creek.

It was built according to security regulations but had not been anchored to the hard-surface roadway. Crews were working to replace the eight-foot-high structure.

The $7,500,000 pontoon bridge spanning Okanagan Lake between Kelowna and Westbank, will be officially opened by the princess next Saturday.

Ex-Miner 'Short-Changed', Shoots Up Idaho Tavern

SANDPOINT, Idaho (AP)—An elderly ex-miner who claimed he was short-changed for a beer flew into a rage Friday night, went home for a pistol, and came back to shoot up the tavern.

Police said Emil Olkonen, 74, killed Mrs. Ruby Tanner, 66, as she sat at the bar; shot point-blank at the bartender, hitting him in the neck; fired at and killed a fleeing customer, then shot twice at his own wife but missed.

Olkonen, his pistol empty, walked out the door and drove three blocks home. The tavern's 10 customers were almost too stunned to move. Police arrived and called for reinforcements from as far as 80 miles away.

The beserk gunman had held up in his modest frame home and put away the pistol for a rifle. Police surrounded the place in the dark and used a loudspeaker to call for his surrender. Just then, a car drove up and the headlights made a perfect target of Police Chief George F. Elliott, 30.

Olkonen fired twice, the first bullet bouncing off the ground and striking Elliott.

With the neighborhood terrified, officers opened up and fired some 300 shots at intervals for the next three hours. It developed they were shooting all along at a dead man. Olkonen's second shot long before was futile.

Police said Olkonen went into the City Club tavern, ordered a beer and got change for a dollar. He argued he gave the bartender, Robert Hunter, $5. Mrs. Tanner, Hunter's mother, finally took change for $5 from her purse, gave it to Olkonen, and told him to leave. He did, but he soon came back.

His first shot killed Mr. Tanner. Hunter, standing scarcely five feet away, shouted "Get out." Olkonen fired point-blank and missed, then fired again and Hunter went down with a bullet wound in the neck.

Bob McMurry, a customer at the end of the bar, raced for an exit and was grazed in the back. Olkonen's wife, with whom he had been quarreling, was the next target. Two bullets whizzed past her head but missed.

Full Car Required For Snack

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—"I was just going home to fix a snack," Watwright Melletters told police.

Inside the car were 60 lemons, 20 pounds of ham, 10 pounds of sugar, 12 pounds of coffee, 15 pounds of assorted cuts of beef, 144 eggs, 100 pounds of potatoes and 20 pounds of macaroni.

Watwright finally admitted he was a cook at the Philadelphia state hospital—and the food belonged there.

Rumblings in Lebanon

Rebels on Attack

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP)—Heavy fighting erupted in Tripoli yesterday after rebels blew up a big electric power station and dynamited the water main supplying the port district.

It climaxed 48 hours of the worst outbreak of shooting and violence in that northern port city since the rebellion broke out 44 days ago.

There was speculation in this capital that the outbreak might be the opening gun for a rebel offensive, long expected here.

A rebel spokesman told The Associated Press Tripoli's Nabil Bared power station, which feeds power to Beirut in peak periods, was blown up Friday.

After a relatively calm morning, shooting broke out again in Tripoli Saturday afternoon.

The rebels also claimed they had blown up a forestry building used by security forces as an observation post in Tripoli.

Despite heavy shooting and widespread violence, the casualties reported were relatively light. Rebels reported eight killed and 26 wounded on their side. Security forces did not give their losses.

Tripoli rebel leader Rashid Karami, former premier, narrowly escaped death Friday when security forces shelled the building in which he is living temporarily. He had left the house only five minutes earlier. Most of the house was destroyed.

In Beirut a customs inspector was killed and three other persons were wounded when rebels ambushed a bus en route to the airport.

U.N. observer teams reported they had arranged for the first time to travel in the northeast-Lebanese area.

Q. Should a young baby be placed on his back or tummy to sleep?

Baby's Sleeping Position

A. Neither, according to an Atlanta baby doctor. Babies, said the physician, should be placed on their side to sleep. In the stomach position the legs tend to spread in frog fashion and the legs rotate or turn outward. The big toe rests on the mattress and the foot is forced into a flatfoot position. Something of the same thing happens when a young baby is placed on his back to sleep. The heels rest on the mattress and the feet tend to be forced into the flatfoot position. To prevent trouble especially flatfoot, in later years the Atlanta doctor recommends placing the baby on his side to sleep. It helps to support the youngster's back with a small pillow or a tightly rolled baby blanket. Never put a baby on his back after feeding. He may spit up some milk and become strangled.

Peace Plea Shaken By Cyprus Terror

Turks Killed, Pledge Revenge

NICOSIA, Cyprus (Reuters)—Greek-Turk violence claimed five more lives Saturday when a bus carrying Turkish Cypriot men, women and children was ambushed and riddled with machine gun, rifle and shotgun fire.

British officials blamed the Greek Cypriot EOKA terrorist underground for the attack at Kondea, 22 miles east of here.

House Fire Spreads To Forest

KELOWNA, B.C. (CP)—A forest fire, propelled by gale-force winds, destroyed at least a farm house and barns and blackened hundreds of acres of grass and scrub timber Saturday night.

The fire was believed to have started in the home and spread to some gasoline tanks which exploded. Winds gusting to 60 miles an hour were blowing and the flames spread to the grass and quickly climbed Black Knight Mountain.

Rutland volunteer fire brigade, augmented by B.C. forestry crews and 100 volunteers from the Rutland area fought the blaze.

in the wave of shootings, stabbings, bombings and arson.

The Greek and Turkish communities have split on the future of the island—with the dominant Greeks favoring union with Greece and the Turkish minority demanding partition of Cyprus into separate Greek and Turkish zones.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN (ESPECIALLY VICTORIA'S MOTORISTS)

The A. B. VOLVO COMPANY, located at Göteborg, Sweden, has been in operation since 1927 and has over 30 years' experience in the manufacture of cars, trucks, buses, tractors, marine and aeroplane engines.

The VOLVO car was introduced into the U.S. in the latter part of 1955. By 1957 sales had climbed to fourth place in imported cars across the nation and second place in the 11 western states. It is interesting to note that the Mr. Hindustan recently docked at Los Angeles carrying 1,008 VOLVO automobiles, which is the largest shipment of imported cars ever to arrive in North America.

There are 400 VOLVO dealers in the U.S., 190 of which are in the 11 western states. Now arrangements have been completed establishing dealers all across Canada. In Victoria, HORWOOD BROS. at 810 Johnson Street, have been appointed as your exclusive VOLVO Dealer. Service is the watchword of the VOLVO company, and bearing this in mind, service training facilities and parts warehouses are already set up in Vancouver and Toronto.

The VOLVO is the car which won the first five places in its class at the Little Le Mans 10-hour endurance test at Lime Rock, Connecticut. In the past two years VOLVO production sedans have won 180 odd races of varying importance in the U.S., including Florida's Daytona Beach and "Little Sebring" races. Among vanquished opponents have been the Porsche Speedster, M.G. and Alfa Romeo.

Due to the sports car performance, VOLVO must, of necessity, give one the smoothest and steadiest rides possible. This is accomplished by coil springing all round. Damping is by tubular shocks outside the coils and stability by panhard bar in rear and torsion bar in front.

- Standard equipment on the VOLVO includes the following:
- Electrolux air conditioner
 - White sidewall tires
 - Twin S.U. carburetors
 - Electric windshield wipers
 - All models pullmanized
 - Coil-springing front and rear
 - Radiator blind
 - Undercoating
 - Custom directional lights
 - Self-adjusting brakes
 - Arm rests
 - Chrome wheel rings
 - Full-flow oil filter
 - Twin visors
 - Courtesy light on doors
 - Cigar lighter

VOLVO is a car built to last for a lifetime. Superb Swedish engineering establishes highest quality throughout. It should do 125,000 miles without an overhaul. Gas consumption averages 35 MPG. The 85-h.p. twin S.U. engine produces 0-60 MPH acceleration in 14 seconds with a top speed of 95 easily attained. Four-speed all-synchromesh gear transmission makes the car a most enjoyable one to drive.

The Princess Margaret

VICTORIA basks this morning in the presence of HRH the Princess Margaret, and a very pleasing and welcome experience it is. The warmth of her reception on arrival here yesterday leaves no room for doubt as to the genuine affection this community has for the young lady who is the Queen's sister, a member of the royal family of marked quality in her own right and one whose welfare commands the sympathetic interest of the people of this area.

It has been the historical lot of the port of Victoria to be linked closely with the Motherland of the British Commonwealth. For many of its earliest years it drew sustenance and guidance directly through the aegis of the Crown the Princess Margaret so ably represents. Her Royal Highness will not be unmindful of the fact that her gracious forebear, Queen Victoria, gave her name to this city, nor of the loyalty expressed in two great world conflicts by the sons and daughters of this community. To the physical ties that past and present have bound Victoria to the royal house there is in addition the personal attachment which today is appreciated more than ever.

This newspaper has perhaps a singular interest in the princess' visit, for it was born almost 100 years ago during the fullness of Queen Victoria's reign, and its life during the past century has coincided with the skein of history and royal progress to which our illustrious guest is heir. It is deeply appreciative therefore of the privilege afforded it of presenting to Her Royal Highness today an illuminated address of fealty and a specially bound replica of the first issue of The Colonist, bearing the date December 11, 1853.

The visit of the Princess Margaret is the piece de resistance of British Columbia's year-long centennial celebrations, and her ready assent to add the royal prerogative to a notable occasion has been gratefully and officially recorded. Victoria is fortunate that its status as the capital city enables it to be the first to applaud her entry and her person, and the wish will be universal here that the royal visit will be as memorable to Her Royal Highness as undoubtedly it is to a community charmed and graced by her presence.

Overcrowded Sidney

FIGURES of private boat traffic through the customs sub-port of Sidney since the summer began should be brought forcibly to the attention of federal departments where they could do some good and not just relegated to the files of customs statistics. They are clear proof, if any were needed, of the urgent need for extension of landing facilities—and not only in the interest of tourist relations but of departmental efficiency as well.

On a single day, the American July 4 holiday, no fewer than 213 yachts and cruisers called at Sidney for customs and immigration inspection, formalities required by law. The press was such that the skimpy little boat basin, too small to handle more than half a dozen boats at a time, proved so inadequate that a large number of visiting mariners had to be sent to another landing four miles away, causing inconvenience not only to them but also to the officials who had to make the journey by car.

The fact that July 4 was a holiday and boat traffic abnormally heavy that day is largely irrelevant. Sidney boat basin has been patently inadequate for a long time, and each year the congestion becomes worse. Since the beginning of this summer calls there for official clearance have increased 40 per cent over those in the corresponding period last year.

This neglect of Sidney is incomprehensible. It could be understood if there were no money available for that kind of development, but year after year the federal government has been spending money high, wide and handsome on boat basins at other points where the number of calls for customs and immigration clearance are negligible. Sidney in summer handles more of these calls than all other British Columbia entry ports put together; yet has to make do with the poorest landing accommodation.

The trouble is that officials who come from Ottawa to look the situation over do so in late fall or winter, when the basin is deserted. If they saw it now they might be able to realize the port's importance during the cruising season, which runs from early May until the end of September.

City of Gardens

ALTHOUGH Victoria is 115 years old, its love of a garden has been one of its enduring traits. One can look out over a line of rooftops in any city, but in this community surmounting the roofs and most often concealing them will be the trees. On boulevard after boulevard grow a score of varieties of deciduous or flowering trees, each a changing pattern through the year. Back of the picket fences and the stone walls of the older properties and the trim lawns of the new ones will be little arboreums reflecting individual choice. And everywhere, from the humblest home to the most ornate, will be a private garden with its wealth of gaily blooming flowers.

One consequence has been the congregation of bird life in Victoria's environs. One can hear the vesper sparrow chirring its soft notes at sundown. In the dawn the Canadian robin carols out its hymn of praise in honor of the newfound day. More than 100 species of birds habituate the coverts, and most of them are songsters. One can hear them over the noise of city traffic at any hour of the day. At twilight, the best of the day in these latitudes, one would not need an orchestra to be entertained if there were a garden nearby.

Natural things stem from natural causes. A moderate climate made gardens in Victoria inevitable, while the lush and verdant growth has brought the singing birds.

Island Editors Say

Owe It to Society

What is needed in our district at present is an awareness on the part of our citizens that when they see some of these dangerous and foolish acts committed by these teenage drivers and others, they be prepared to make note of the licence number, lay charges and back them up with testimony if necessary. We know this is not a pleasant thing for anyone to do, but we owe it to society.

It is our hope that the new Safety Council, with the full co-operation of the public, will make our district known as a "very tough place" to get away with traffic violation of any kind.

Foolhardy Few

Like the modern car, the modern outboard motorboat can be a dangerous instrument when there is a fool at the controls. There have already been complaints about speed boat operators roaring into the Transfer Beach to bring their boats to a stop just inches away from the beach. This sort of performance may pass for skill among their empty-headed friends, but it is infuriating to parents and others concerned with the safety of children swimming at the beach.

Impound Their Cars

Many suspensions of driving privileges have been ordered but it seems that this punishment is punishment in name only. More and more do we read of people being fined for driving while their suspensions are in force.

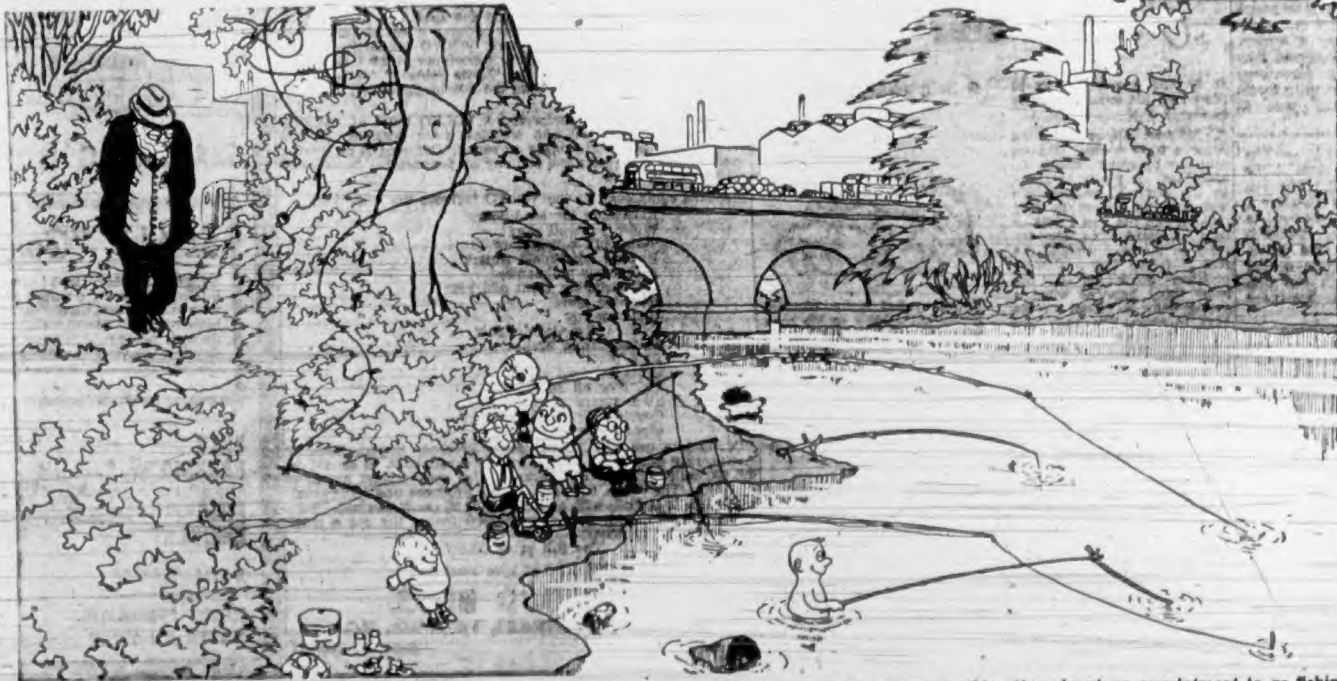

It would seem that impounding the vehicle should now be tried, so that a person whose licence is suspended is relieved of temptation to further break the law.

Add to the fine the cost of storage during suspension and we may have a punishment which will make these idiots who treat cars like toys stop and think.

Thinking Aloud

of shoes—and ships—and sealing wax—of cabbages and kings."

By TOM TAYLOR

NO fairy tale worth its salt is complete without a princess; although the reality of a princess far outshines the wistful sentiment of the fairy tale reader.

There is nevertheless a fairy tale atmosphere about Victoria today, for a real princess—and a very charming one—is staying in our midst. This is not an experience that can be repeated often, but that very circumstance makes the present occasion all the more delightful.

May the Princess Margaret find her visit here as pleasing as we find her presence gratifying.

I was climbing into the barber's chair when a radio voice said that a chuckle was the sound of a smile. A good definition that, and the kind of phrase-making that takes my fancy. Laughter can be malicious but a smile—usually is friendly, and so a chuckle is neatly catalogued when cited as its voice.

If you wondered about the silent tread of U.S. sailors during Friday's naval parade, here's the answer: they wore rubber heels on their shoes. This because that is the practice on U.S. aircraft carriers and these sailors, of course, were mostly from the Bennington. Lack of the sound when heels meet pavement put them at a disadvantage, however, for it's the clinkety-beat of feet in unison that helps men on the march.

Old age must so often be a lonely business, especially when one's own generation are mostly gone and the friends of former years are no longer around. Younger people, for all their good will and in spite of occasional qualms of conscience, are prone to stay away from too much contact with elderly folk. The totems are so widely different.

Blessed it is then when memories of happy bygone days can solace and enrich the twilight of life.

From "More Prayers and Graces": The usual, drastically brief, naval grace is "Thank God." An admiral, entering late for dinner, looked round the dining-table and said: "No chaplain? Thank God."

Talking of last week's international naval parade the contrast between the sailors of three separate navies was interesting. As they passed yours truly on Yates Street there wasn't a pin between them for precision and alignment but there was variety just the same. The RN contingent marched with assurance but without conspicuous elan. The U.S. sailors seemed unduly quiet in manner, probably because they carried no arms and thus looked informal. I may be prejudiced but it was the RCN that took the eye. The Esquimalt sailors swung their arms high and they had more ardor to their bearing.

In short, they had some swank about them, which is what all troops on public display should have. Putting on the dog is part and parcel of a naval or military show.

A lady of quality sends me a prayer she would like to see in print, and this being Sunday, nothing could be more appropriate. Here it is:

"O God, we beseech Thee that Thy peace may be brought to this earth, that the ministers of Thy nations and the churches of Thy nations may feel the power of that peace, and that war among nations may cease."

"O Lord, give us brotherhood between men; fill the hearts of all Thy people with love."

"We ask Thee to give unto Thy messengers the power to influence and urge the coming of peace and goodwill on earth. Amen."

Letter from London

The Chancellor Makes Concessions

By RICHARD L. THOMAS

THE British chancellor of the exchequer has been graciously pleased to inform the private banking companies that after the end of July he will not be concerned with the drafts granted to customers provided they do not get out of hand. If they do he will ask the Bank of England to call for additional deposits from the banks. He hopes that will not be necessary. If it is also means, of course, that the banks will have to obtain those deposits by calling in a portion of their overdrafts to customers.

The chancellor has also agreed that capital and company floatations may proceed without any bureaucratic blessing provided the capital demand does not exceed £50,000. Until the beginning of July it was £10,000.

I asked a bank manager to explain in as practical terms as he could what the changes really mean. He smiled and said, "Well, if you lodge £1,000 worth of security with the bank we will probably allow you a £700 overdraft." A variant of the old definition of a bank as an institution which lends out umbrellas and raincoats but calls them in as soon as it is likely to rain.

The fact that new companies with a capital of £50,000 could be formed without authority from the capital issues committee was largely in the interests of administrative simplicity. There were too many ways of getting round small capital issues. The big boys would still have to beg.

Bluntly the concessions are not likely to make much difference to the ordinary British citizen—but they may well be pointers. If, for example, they are followed by concessions in the time payments laws—as some who ought to know predict—then it will affect most people. At present it is compulsory to pay one-third down for most things except houses, and payments have to be completed within two years. But even these restrictions have been got round by purely legal means.

Finance houses for example have made cash loans to customers which are paid over as a cash deposit to another finance house which is associated with them and which is financing the time-payment deal. There are no laws against loan-in-cash, and even in the case of bank overdrafts it has only been a gentlemen's agreement. There is no doubt, however, that the restrictions have limited credit sales particularly in the furniture trade.

What is intriguing the economists is the motive behind the chancellor's decision. Nominally it is based on the generally improved economic situation, including a substantial build-up in dollar reserves. But there may be other influences at work, especially a fear that the depression which hit the United States and Canada last winter and still has to be completely shaken off may reach Britain and Europe next winter. Economic patterns suggest that this is not unlikely, based on precedent. Indeed signs are not lacking that it may have started in a mild form. This may well have inspired the chancellor to give a lift to industry before the full effects are felt.

There is, of course, a tremendous amount of conservatism in Britain in the literal and not political sense. It is surprising, for example, how concerned members of parliament are about the cotton industry in Lancashire. This industry, for long the staple one in that county, has suffered acutely as the result of imports from Hong Kong and India. Much has been made of comparatively good quality shirts imported for the equivalent of 75 cents against a comparative quality price of more than twice the amount in Lancashire.

Both sides of the House of Commons have appealed for tariffs against shirts admitted under Commonwealth trade preference on the grounds of the low wages paid in Hong Kong, which in turn has resulted in redundancy amongst Lancashire cotton operatives and thousands of dismissals.

It sounds bad until you look at the figures. In fact, during this period of acute difficulty to cotton operatives employment in Lancashire has actually increased to a point 2 per cent above, from the time when cotton was booming. All that cheap shirts have done is to reduce the cost of living and make some Lancashire cotton operatives change their jobs. In fact the concern of members of parliament is really nothing more than the cotton operatives' demand for cotton operatives by increasing the cost of living to citizens generally, and should not go into the engineering factories which are booming.

It is traditionalism gone bad. And no one seems greatly concerned that the admittedly underpaid cotton workers of Hong Kong, India and Pakistan should be underpaid—they suggest inferentially that they should be made to starve by a tariff protection which would put them out of work.

Obviously the situation calls for difficult individual adjustments and few workers are initially happy about changing a job at which they are skilled and acquiring a new skill, but it seems to be a case where the few must be sacrificed for the many.

The essence of efficient international trade is that each nation should produce what it can do most efficiently. There is argument in favor of a tariff if unemployment is produced, though obviously a selfish argument, but surely even selfishness cannot extend to the comparative discomfort of changing a job.

If the chancellor by means of lower interest rates, improved credit facilities and fewer controls—followed it is hoped by tax concessions—is able to encourage new industries, more speculative enterprise, some of which is bound to pay off allied with reduced living costs without a reduced standard of living then great improvements may be expected in Britain. But if we are going to be sidetracked by the fact that a few highly vocal voters are moaning about having to change their jobs it is not too much to say that traditionalism has not only gone bad but mad.

The Packsack

By GREGORY CLARK

THE biologists studying our fish and wildlife resources are coming to the opinion that good years and bad years have existed for countless ages before man started to upset the balance, and that the real reason why fish, say, are scarce this season in certain waters is due more to a bad spawning season four or five years ago than to the activities of even a swarm of fishermen.

This does not mean that the presence of man has not something to do with the scarcity. It means that the presence of man, with his dam lowering and raising water levels, cutting off the timber, clearing the land for cultivation of farms, filling the water with oil and acids from his highways, engines, boats, and otherwise interfering with the natural resources of the fish, has upset the ideal spawning conditions that make for a plentiful supply of fish.

A thousand years ago any given lake you have in mind used to have good and bad years. Cold, changeable weather, for six years in succession, could almost wipe out the population of any fish you have in mind. Then, following two or three years of weather ideal for spawning, the lake would, in three or four years, fairly jump with fish.

What the biologists are saying is that we should take as much account of the public health of nature as we do of the public health of us two-legged consumers of nature.

Position of ships during the historic naval review, Tuesday, starting at 3 p.m. at Royal Roads anchorage is shown on naval map. A total of 32 ships, counting the review ship which will carry Princess Margaret on her inspection of the four lines of anchored craft, will take part in the spectacular show, highlight of Navy Week here. Vessels taking part range from the 31,500-ton United States carrier,

Bennington, to RCMP patrol craft. There will be five U.S., one British and 18 Canadian navy vessels. Thousands are expected to crowd view points along the shores from Macaulay Point on the city side of Esquimalt Harbor to Lagoon Road and Metchosin high points on the far side of Royal Roads. Princess Margaret will board HMCS Crescent at Black Ball Ferry dock near the Causeway at 2.35 p.m. A Royal 21-gun salute will roar at 2.58 p.m., two minutes before the Crescent starts her sweep along the lines of anchored ships. Cheers, traditional when Royalty reviews a fleet, will ring out from each ship as the Crescent passes with Princess Margaret on the bridge. A fireworks display from the illuminated ships at anchor will flare out after sunset. Special arrangements are being made to handle traffic on shore.

Soviet Leader Sees Summit But Far Away

MOSCOW (AP) — Premier Khrushchev said Saturday the Soviet Union still wants a summit conference and declared one will be held, "if not with present leaders, then with their successors."

But the Soviet Premier, emphasizing his points with stabs of his stubby finger, again rejected two points the West insists on discussion at such a conference — disarmament controls and Russia's satellite nations.

"We will speak about controls when there is complete trust," he declared, indicating such trust between East and West might be a long time arriving. "It would be better not to meet" if the West keeps on insisting that one of the subjects be the satellite countries, he said.

"How could one propose that the Communists should agree to discuss with the capitalists how to liquidate socialist order in a given state?" he asked.

Two Good Chances To View Sputnik III

Those who missed seeing Sputnik III and its rocket carrier will have a good chance of spotting the artificial moon tonight and Monday night if the sky remains clear.

The satellite, about the same size as an automobile, will loop overhead at 10.06 p.m., going from the southeast to the north at about 30 degrees elevation.

The carrier rocket, 10 times as heavy, will follow at 11.16 p.m., arcing across the north-west horizon at about 17 degrees.

Monday, only the satellite is visible. At 10.38 p.m. it appears in the western sky and moves north at a high level, offering one of the best chances of seeing the instrument-loaded baby moon.

Those who saw the satellite and carrier rocket move across the sky last night may not realize that when it disappeared over the horizon, it was about 1,000 miles away, somewhere over the Peace River country, Dr. R. M. Petrie, observatory director said.

The satellite moves at a speed of about 18,000 miles an hour, taking 105 minutes to circle the globe, he added. The rocket carrier is a bit faster, requiring only 104 minutes.

When overhead here, the satellite was about 150 miles high, near its lowest point. Its apogee is about 500 miles.

Eisenhower-Diefenbaker View

Cold War Killing Nationalism

By HAROLD MORRISON

OTTAWA (CP) — Russia's new economic cold war may eventually force the free countries to make nationalism obsolete.

That, in essence, appears to be one of the main thoughts to emerge from the three-day conference between President Eisenhower and Prime Minister Diefenbaker.

The U.S. government agreed to consult with Canada where American export laws prevent American-controlled companies in Canada from trading with Communist China in non-strategic goods.

The way Mr. Diefenbaker sees it, it paves the way for these subsidiaries to base their export policy solely on Canadian law.

U.S. companies have subsidiaries in many parts of the world. If such a concession is allowed for those located in Canada, why should they not also be allowed for those in other countries? And if they are to be allowed for subsidiaries, why not for the parent companies?

Thus, the U.S. may find herself in an untenable position in maintaining an embargo on trade with Red China.

Two Die Hunting For Each Other

PITT MEADOWS, B.C. (CP) — An elderly Pitt Meadows man and his eight-year-old grandson died early yesterday apparently attempting to save each other from the grandfather's burning house.

Eyewitnesses said both had safely escaped the raging inferno but raced back into the two-storey frame house to look for each other.

RCMP found their bodies huddled close to each other in the charred ruins of the front room.

Cheers from Crowd of 3,000 Ring in Princess' Ears at Entrance to Empress

Cheering crowd of 3,000 gathered along the Empress Hotel sidewalk and pushed up against the steps at the main entrance as Princess Margaret arrived yesterday for the start of her Victoria visit. Crowd waved and smiled as she walked up the sidewalk and steps, but called in vain for her to reappear after she had entered the hotel. — (Photo by William A. Boucher)

Crowd Wins a Smile

Victorians, Visitors Rub Shoulders for Moment's Look

By G. E. MORTIMORE

Princess Margaret of Windsor, a tiny figure in blue, smiled and waved to 3,000 cheering people as she walked from a limousine up the front path of the Empress Hotel, with Lieutenant Governor Frank Ross at her left hand.

She made her way to the royal suite in the vine-covered north wing of the hotel and stayed there, despite volleys of clapping and shouts of "We Want Margaret" from a persistent crowd in front of the hotel.

The chattering, flag waving, good-humored throng began to gather in brilliant sunshine about 9 a.m. when there was a thin line of people on each side of Government Street and along the path from the sidewalk to the hotel.

There was no long wait for good positions. Anyone who arrived by 10.30, some 15 minutes before the scheduled arrival time of the royal party, could find a close-up standing place that commanded a good view of the princess.

Brought Ladder
Alec Mulligan of Toronto, perched on a paint-spattered step-ladder about 10 feet back from the place where Princess Margaret was due to alight said:

"This thing looked pretty silly when I first came down here, but people aren't laughing at it now."

From his perch he commanded a clear view of the princess and party.

White-bearded F. J. Beatty, 92, of 2826 Austin Street, arrived too late for a front position, but seated himself well back in a folding chair, and did not seem concerned about the wall of humanity that stood between himself and the path of the princess.

"I've never seen a member of the royal family before, and I want to see the princess, but I'm not going to break my neck to do it," he said calmly.

Camera-toting guests, and chambermaids in white, got out of windows.

In the last few minutes the crowd grew quickly. An elderly man with a good position beside the path fainted from the heat.

As she entered the elevator, the princess said "How do you do" to elevator operator Jean Speller.

And when she left, she told away.

First aid men revived him and the stir and rustle of the crowd, tried to persuade him to leave which had picked up word, and go somewhere for a rest, though by extra-sensory perception, that the princess was near.

Scarlet-coated Mounties, city policemen and naval petty officers with gleaming white belts stood guard along the edges of the well-behaved crowd.

Yankee sailors in their white peaked hats crowded around to crowd forward.

A mounted policeman, asking questions, focused cameras on the back their feet as the patrol place where they hoped the princess would walk.

A man with a movie camera stood on a picnic basket, shooting a view of the crowd.

Numerous Empress Hotel guests, and some visitors who had come in from the street, sat around the hotel lobby reading newspapers and trying to look calm. But there was an expectant feeling in the air.

Hotel officials said that some 500 persons were registered in the hotel, including roughly 100 newspapermen and members of the royal party.

Flags and banners waved from stands in the lawn and from the walls and the flower-dotted balcony of the hotel.

Across the harbor, the strident sound of the ship's bells rang out as the ship's band played the national anthem.

In the last few minutes, the rainbow-colored throng grew thicker and more excited.

A tired little boy with a Union Jack in his hand lay asleep on the grass, oblivious of the path fainted from the heat.

Crowds Nudged

Three motorcycle policemen rode along the left-hand side of Government Street, nudging back the people who had begun to crowd forward.

Children sitting on the Government Street sidewalk drew their feet as the patrol place where they hoped the princess would walk.

Then another group of patrolmen swept down the right side of the street followed by the royal motorcade.

Loud cheers and clapping broke out at intervals.

On the balcony, where a small press party had peered through the geraniums at the arrival of the princess — in obedience to police order to keep out of sight — numbers of extra reporters and photographers began arriving.

The crowd, staring intently at them, shouted: "We want Margaret!"

The "We Want Margaret" shouters were reinforced by a group of school children who sang out their summons to the princess.

More than an hour passed before the bulk of the crowd gave up hope and began drifting away.

As she entered the elevator, the princess said "How do you do" to elevator operator Jean Speller.

And when she left, she told away.

Navy Mass At Naden

A special mass will be conducted by Bishop James M. Hill of Victoria on the field in front of the officers' wardroom at HMCS Naden at 9.30 a.m. today.

Navy officials said last night the service will be open to all visiting Roman Catholic sailors and to any civilians who wish to attend.

Busy Time Monday

Princess Margaret will attend divine services this morning at Christ Church Cathedral, and that will be her only scheduled appearance today.

But a full round of events awaits the petite Princess on Monday.

At 10.55 a.m. today Princess Margaret will ride to the cathedral by way of Government House.

At the cathedral, Lieutenant Governor Ross will present the princess to the congregation.

At 11.40, the armed services parade and RCAF fly-past will begin. Princess Margaret will review the parade from a stand on Government in front of the Empress Hotel.

At 12.45, representatives of the churches, judiciary and their wives will be presented in the hotel, and a provincial government luncheon will follow.

The princess will attend the lieutenant governor's garden party in the grounds of Government House at 4.15 p.m., travel there by Government limousine, then by Government limousine to Douglas Park Drive, Dallas, Cook and Roeland.

The princess will leave the garden party at 5.30 for the hotel by Rockland, Vancouver, Burdett, Quadra, Blanshard and Belleville.

Inside the building, ministers and MLAs, deputy ministers, just stepped off a Trans-Canada Air Lines plane as the princess stepped out of her RCAF C-5.

The passengers all congratulated the pilot, Mrs. Hilda Griffin, Turner said. "He timed it wonderfully. He evidently knew what he was doing."

Mrs. Griffin said she used to see the princess as a child in London.

"She is grown up now," she added.

Another member of the crowd who had seen Princess Margaret previously was John Pedlow of Sidney, an employee of Fairley Aviation Co. of Canada Ltd., at the airport.

"He came to Canada from Northern Ireland six years ago," he said. "It was Ireland," he said.

"Let's not get Eire mixed up in this," he said.

Mr. Pedlow said he would have dressed up in overalls and pretended he was working if the public had not been allowed into the airport to see the princess arrive.

He said he pulled a similar stunt to see a member of the Royal Family name an aircraft in a ceremony in a United Kingdom factory.

There should have been more provision for children to see the princess arrive, Mr. Pedlow said.

Mr. and Mrs. John Shephard of Patricia Bay, interrupted a holiday in Campbell River to see Princess Margaret arrive.

"We think we really were well repaid for coming to see her," said Mr. Shephard. "We got a big kick out of it."

Mrs. Shephard added: "She was very, very sweet and very much like the photographs."

Mr. Shephard said he had decorated his own home with a six-by-seven foot flag for the occasion.

Skies Roar With Jets Tomorrow

Eighteen RCAF Auxiliary Sabre jets and T33 Silver Stars will be flying wing to wing with the regular air force CF-100s during the fly-past in honor of Princess Margaret over Victoria Monday at 11.40 a.m.

To form the giant "M" formation of the fly-past, 37 aircraft will be used, creating the largest mass fly-past of jet and piston-driven aircraft ever flown over Victoria.

Three Victoria and district airmen will take part in the fly-past.

FO Sinclair Ash, 24, son of R. L. Ash of Langford, will be an observer in a Lancaster 407 Maritime Squadron of Comox.

FO Sherratt, 28, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sydney Sherratt, 2725 Musgrave, will fly as observer in a CF-100.

FO Ronald C. Scattergood, 22, son of Mr. and Mrs. Scattergood, 1680 Island Highway, will also be a CF-100 observer.

He Saw Princess

Mr. Marjanovich, Too

By DAVID FRANCIS

Not only the Anglo-Saxon set was out to welcome Prince Margaret on her arrival at Patricia Bay Airport yesterday.

There were also such gentlemen as Michael Marjanovich of Sidney, who 72 years ago was born in Serbia, now part of Yugoslavia.

"Best ceremony I've ever seen, I never felt so bad as now," he said, pulling a white handkerchief from his pocket and dabbing a wet eye.

Asked the reason for his sadness, Mr. Marjanovich reminisced about his boyhood in Serbia and King Alexander and Queen Draga.

"He was like anybody else. I have seen him hundreds of times. The King and Queen often came in the school to visit."

The Royal pair was assassinated in 1903.

Today, he said, Yugoslavia is a Communist state ruled by

New Canadians Recall Other Days, Other Royalty

Marshall Tito and Serbia's King another among the 1,000 in the crowd.

"The Communists take everything, no matter what you've got. You've got to do what the Communists want."

Mr. Marjanovich now is retired and walks with a cane. But he carries a button indicating his work as a munitions worker during the World Wars.

Another royal family was recalled by Mrs. Jan Selzing, 5186 Guernsey Street, watching the princess' arrival with her six-year-old boy, Mickey, who was dressed in an RCMP uniform.

Mrs. Selzing and her husband, a forester, left Copenhagen, Denmark, six years ago.

"The last day before we left Queen and the three Princesses for Canada, we met the Danish on the street. Nobody pays any attention. They were just walking in the street."

Mickey was only one, then, and probably too young to remember seeing Queen Ingrid, Mrs. Selzing said.

The Danish Royal Family rounding it. "If you officially has much less protocol—surround them, then you curtsy," Mrs. Selzing recalled that the late King Frederick IX moved to a castle outside of Copenhagen and how she and other children would bring flowers to him.

"Sometimes he would sit the children on the horse in front of him."

During the Second World War, he made a practice of riding through Copenhagen on his horse.

"He was very friendly with the people," Mrs. Selzing said. "But a German soldier would salute him and he would turn his back to him."

Mrs. Selzing had a daughter, nine-year-old Jette, among the throng of Brownies who cheered the Princess and so did Mrs. Bert Johns, 3013 Old West Road, perfect as you can get," Mr. Christian said of the navy honor guard.

Noting that this is the first visit of Princess Margaret to Canada, he said: "She should have been here before, since Canada is one of the major countries in the Commonwealth."

Two visitors from Calgary, Mrs. Edna Henning Turner and her sister, Mrs. Hilda Griffin, just stepped off a Trans-Canada Air Lines plane as the princess stepped out of her RCAF C-5.

"The passengers all congratulated the pilot," Mrs. Hilda Griffin, Turner said. "He timed it wonderfully. He evidently knew what he was doing."

Buttery Perfection

The Porsche is small and not very expensive as fine imports go, but it stands right at the top of the connoisseur's list in its class.

Like last week's subject, the MG TC, the Porsche is a sports car, but aside from that the two machines have almost nothing in common. Where the TC is noisy, hard-riding and breezy, the Porsche slips smoothly along and hardly disturbs the air.

LIKE PLANE

The TC is sporty the way riding a horse is sporty. The Porsche is more like a plane.

Our specimen today is Bruce Passmore's brand-new Porsche 1600 coupe. The changes from the previous 1600 are few but helpful. Carburetion has been changed to give more pulling power at low engine speeds (it still isn't at all happy below 3,000 rpm.). The seat backs have been contoured to give more leg room to the occasional rear seat passenger. Bumper overriders have been added. And that's about it.

BIG HORSEPOWER

The air-cooled, rear-mounted engine is rated at 60 horsepower, but they're very big horsepower, measured by the German DIN system with all accessories operating. The Porsche gets off the mark like a jackrabbit and it calls for a quick easing up on the throttle to avoid over-revving in first gear.

Second gear is about right for city driving, third for highway passing, and fourth for loafing along the open road. All the forward speeds are synchronized, so that a shift down into first is just as quick and easy as any other. And very useful, too.

ACTION BUTTERY

Help for Tourists
Auto court operators in the Victoria district have opened a tourist information booth at the Roundabout which will be open from 7 p.m. to 11.30 p.m. daily.

The brakes have this same peculiar quality—rather soft and gradual in application, but tremendously effective when required. Even the car's ride is soft and floating (gravel washboards just can't be felt) but the Porsche skips the road like a bulldozer.

EFFICIENCY TOPS

The coupe's looks may not appeal to everybody—it has its unattractive angles—but nobody can dispute its efficiency. With all its high performance it still gets about 37 miles to the gallon at cruising speeds.

Being so different from other cars has its disadvantages. On the highway—the Porsche follows a slightly wavy line that gets more pronounced the more you try to correct it. The secret is not to try.

ATTRACTS POLICE

And while the Porsche may easily deceive its driver about how fast it's going, it tends to attract the attention of the police.

I'm here to tell you this can cost money.

Industrious Jerry Earns Top Billing

Most of the work for any stage show is done before the curtains go up, which is why Jerry Gosley has every right to put his name ahead of Victoria's annual summer smile show.

He invented this particular version of an English music hall, and each year gives his spare time for six months to choosing the material, writing most of it, picking the cast, directing the rehearsals and, finally, running the show, in which he appears more often than any other performer.

PROGRAM MADE UP

For the fifth annual show, at the Atlas Theatre every Thursday to Saturday until Aug. 16 under North Kiwanis sponsorship, Jerry chose Grace Fields and Stanley Holloway songs, picked a skit suggested by Connie Thompson of Victoria, updated the famous English colonel and other past acts and added four songs and much other new material.

He reckons he wrote close to 90 minutes of the two-hour show. Writing started in February, rehearsals began in May and the books will be closed at the end of August.

LOSES WEIGHT

During this time, the 43-year-old, Yorkshire-born printing salesman will lose 15 pounds, as he does each smile show, but "I regain it all by relaxing the other six months."

The financial return is small, but adopted Victorian (since 1947) Gosley does the show he

'Thank Goodness For Those Tourists'

By BRUCE LOWTHER

If it wasn't for the tourists, Straw Hat Theatre, Victoria's pany in four years, would have closed in its first week.

Producer-director Mrs. Flora Nicholson reported yesterday that audience averaged 75 a night in the first week of the mystery "The Whole Truth," but there were "only about four Victorians each night."

"We feel we should try to go on," she said. "But we're disappointed... It's a pretty good indication Victoria doesn't want a professional theatre."

Present hope is to continue "The Whole Truth" one week, days for the rest of this month, with a comedy called "Dry Rot" following. If things turn profitable, the cast of students will share the profits for use in furthering their education.

Grace Bumbry, 21-year-old American mezzo-soprano, will be the guest soloist at the second and final Victoria Symphony Orchestra summer concert in the Butchart Gardens Thursday evening.

Sir Ernest MacMillan will be in the audience as representative of the Canada Council.

Miss Bumbry, a pupil of Lotte Lehmann and a winner of the Marian Anderson award, will sing popular arias by Saint-Saens, Verdi and Tschalkowsky.

Hans Gruber will conduct the orchestra in Bizet's "Carmen" overture and "L'Arlesienne."

Wood had read the minutes of several special meetings during the preceding month. Minutes of the meeting of June 24 said that following a meeting of a committee of the whole, the council convened, and adopted the recommendations of the committee. No hint was given as to what the recommendations were.

NO CHANCE

"Are we right in doing this?" asked Coun. Lamont. "There are matters here of public interest, and the public has no chance to hear them. Shouldn't we give notice of meeting?"

"Of course we're right," snapped Reeve H. R. Brown. "If any ratepayer wants to object, we'll open the whole thing up."

"It is customary for all parliamentary bodies to get the same way," said Coun. W. F. Grafton. "Why shouldn't we?"

"Quite proper," Clerk-Wood was emphatic. "As far as legality is concerned, I'm sure it's quite proper," he said.

Coun. Lamont accepted the decision.

None of the councillors bothered to refer to the Municipal Act, Paragraph one, section 160, reads:

'We Want Margaret'

We want Margaret, the crowd shouted at the Empress Hotel after the Princess had entered the main door of her hotel to relax in her suite. The hopeful crowd looked up at the balcony but the Princess did not appear.—(Colonist photo by Bud Kinsman)

Empress Crowd Unheeded

By R. O. MARRION

"We want Margaret! We want Margaret! We want Margaret!" Led by a foghorn-voiced evangelist from Sacramento, California, hundreds of persons on the Empress Hotel lawn shouted and chanted these words at intervals yesterday for more than half an hour after Princess Margaret smiled and waved to them from the veranda and disappeared into the hotel.

FIVE-HOUR WAIT

Some of them said they had waited five hours to see the princess arrive at the hotel and then had caught the briefest glimpse of her walking slowly up the path to the main entrance of the hotel.

They wanted to see the Princess clearly, they wanted her to come out on the balcony, and they cheered and chanted and whistled and a few of them grew angry.

FROM CALIFORNIA

The evangelist who called out most resolutely of all said he was Dr. Everett Johnson of Sacramento, Calif., in Victoria with Mrs. Johnson on a visit. More than half an hour after the arrival of Princess Margaret, he learned that the royal suite was in the north wing of the hotel, not near the main entrance, and he led the dwindling crowd to the north driveway.

HUNGRY, TIRED

Princess Margaret, in the north wing, probably didn't hear the enthusiastic outburst from the crowd in the first half-hour. Hungry and likely tired after her long trip, although not showing signs of tiredness, the Princess was reported to have ordered something to eat immediately after her arrival.

CROWD OF 3,000

When Princess Margaret stepped from the royal car at 10:52, reporters estimated there were more than 3,000 people in the crowd.

Princess Margaret, with Lieutenant-Governor Frank Ross at her side and other members of the Royal party following, smiled and waved to the cheering and clapping crowd.

CONSTANT SMILE

The smile never left her face as she walked slowly up the path and the steps. At the top of the steps, the Princess turned and smiled and waved at the crowd before entering the hotel.

The crowd outside seemed to anticipate automatically that the Princess would reappear, and hundreds upon hundreds of faces and cameras were turned to the balcony. Within a couple of minutes the "We Want Margaret" chant was started and taken up, but there was no reappearance.

"It's disgraceful!" "I think it's disgraceful. It's the government's fault," said one elderly woman at about 11:30. "At home they would always come out for a minute or two."

Reminded that Princess Margaret had just finished a long and tiring journey, the woman snapped: "She doesn't have to unpack and go through customs. I do, when I travel."

Another woman complained: "If they are making such a fuss about it, why can't she come out? They always do in England."

About to Set Foot in Canada

Sidelights Of Arrival

It took only a moment for the Royal car to pass by Mr. and Mrs. Walter Ible, of Chico, Calif., and their four-year-old son, Billy.

But it was a moment they will long remember.

No royalist among the Canadians lining the street could have been more excited than these United States citizens.

They came here expressly for a glimpse of the smiling Princess.

Mr. Ible found himself trying to explain why Americans have a soft spot for royalty of a neighboring country.

"We think royalty is fine," he said. "Some English people seem to have misgivings because of the cost. But not us. She's a princess. She's a good scout."

Just around noon yesterday downtown crowds thought they were going to get a second look at the princess when a scarlet-coated RCMP constable on a motorcycle with siren screaming and red light flashing drove through town. Behind him were four naval trucks marked "Royal Baggage". The trucks contained four trunks and 30 suitcases.

Princess Margaret will worship today in a church with close associations with her home and family.

A wrought-iron railing a few feet in front of her pew in Christ Church Cathedral is the one at which her mother and father were married. It was later sent to Victoria.

A dosail of blue, with crowns, behind the altar was part of the decor at the Coronation of Queen Elizabeth, and the Bishop's Chair, formerly used in St. Paul's Cathedral and damaged in the war, is a reminder of the "Blitz."

An anonymous observer telephoned the Colonist to complain about "Oregonians" on boats below the Causeway ignoring the arrival of the Princess.

"They are unhappy about the Columbia, you know, and I think they were displaying their hostility," he said.

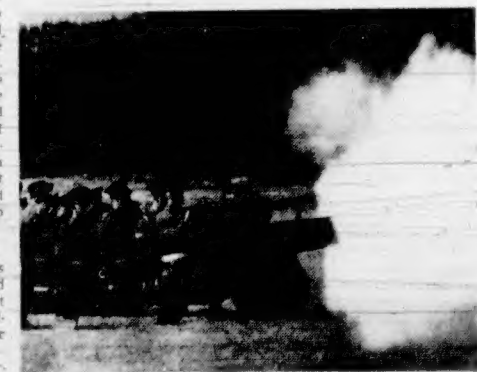

"I just saw her on television and now I really am going to see her," said one excited little girl at the intersection of Douglas and the Island Highway as she rushed from her home across the street to get a good position to see the royal procession.

That, apparently, is what many Douglas Street vicinity residents did. They watched the arrival on television and then rushed to see the Princess drive by. Minutes before the procession passed that point a crowd of about 200 swelled to 500 as residents came flocking from their nearby homes.

Soon after the smiling princess arrived in her suite at the Empress Hotel she sipped a gin and tonic and smoked an American cigaret in a gold holder.

At the request of Princess Margaret, films of her first two days in Victoria will be shown on channel 6 at 6 p.m. today and watched by her in the Empress Hotel suite of Lieutenant-Governor Frank Ross.

CHEK cameraman Jim Walton happened to be present yesterday when the princess asked the lieutenant-governor if she could see the films, and arrangements were completed on the spot.

21-Gun Salute

Deafening roar shook Patricia Bay Airport yesterday as the 5th Independent B.C. Medium Battery of Victoria fired a 21-gun salute when Princess Margaret's plane touched down on a runway and taxied towards the terminal. (Colonist photo by Jim Ryan)

Garden Notes

Consider This Lily!

By M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS.
BLACK LILY—(C.H.H., Victoria). From the excellent sketch you sent me of the plant you know by the name of Black Lily, I am reasonably sure Dragon Arum. You can confirm this identification by sniffing the flower—it should emit the fragrance of a beefsteak which has been better days. This is because it is pollinated by carrion flies, which are attracted by the offensive odor.

The plant is a close relative of the Calla Lily, Jack-in-the-pulpit, and the Skunk Cabbage.

The seeds of Chinese Hollyhock I sent you were forwarded to me by a reader, and I'm afraid I don't have the foggiest idea of what they are—probably Malva chinensis.

HYDRANGEA TROUBLES—(D.G., Victoria). I think a form of mildew is probably responsible for the petals of your hydrangeas turning brown. Your bush may have become overgrown and congested, with a lack of free air circulation through it, and it would be helpful to remove some of the branches and shoots growing in toward the centre, opening up the shrub for light and air to enter.

If you have any Poinsettia or Rose Dust handy, give the blooms and leaves a light dusting occasionally.

PEONIES. The reason why all the nuts drop off your tree when they reach the size of small marbles is because the female blossoms were not pollinated. In some years, and on some trees, the male catkins appear too early to pollinate the female flowers. This may right itself as the tree gets older, although some trees never do grow out of the habit of producing their male and female flowers at a too widely separated interval.

For this reason, it is always best to plant more than one tree, so there will be some overlapping of the blossom period.

REGAL LILY—(E.R.F., Victoria). You are to be congratulated on achieving 11 blossoms on one single Regal Lily. I don't think this would constitute a record, but it is certainly a much better performance than usual.

UNTHRIFTY RHUBARB—(A.L.N., Victoria). I think the reason for the thin, scrawny shoots from your newly-planted rhubarb is because you buried the roots too deeply. Like peonies, these plants are exceptionally sensitive to planting depth and in the case of the rhubarb, the crown—the terminal buds on top of the roots—should be sitting through the surface when planting is completed.

You could try scraping away some of the soil over the roots, but in any case they should be lifted next winter and replanted at a shallower depth. Treat your rhubarb next spring as newly-planted stock, and take no crop from it the first year.

FLOWER FOR GRAVE—(F.E.L., Vancouver). The "rose" you saw growing on a grave, with finely-cut, ferny foliage, is not a rose at all, but a rather uncommon peony. This fern-leaved peony has quite a mouthful of a name: Paeonia officinalis tenuifolia. Paeonia means double flowered, tenuifolia means fern-leaved, and officinalis refers to the fact that this plant was once used in medicine. This one is earliest in flower of all the peonies.

The Viewing World

By John Crosby

No Money in History

There were several historic occasions this last week. One was the end of Edward R. Murrow's "See It Now" after seven years of distinguished history. The other was the end of Elfrida Von Nardoff after 21 weeks on "Twenty-One." The events are more or less complementary.

"See It Now" was born in the early days of television when it was thought that TV was a tremendous new medium for the exchange of information and ideas. "Twenty-One" came along in the later phase when it was discovered that television was far better suited to play parlor games and give away money.

"See It Now" enlightened us. "Twenty-One" stupefied us. One used television more or less as a public service on behalf of the viewers; the other uses it solely to sell as much of the sponsor's product as possible.

The last of the "See It Now" programs was one of the best of them and it exemplified why the program was the greatest prizewinner of television. It tackled an enormously important subject, the rebirth of an immensely powerful and prosperous West Germany.

"See It Now" is going down the drain because it has had trouble attracting sponsors and because it was expensive. Yet, when you see Ed Murrow and Fred Friendly, by means of prestige alone, attracting to their cameras the top leaders and industrialists of Germany and all for free, you begin to wonder at the economics of television.

CBS can afford to pay Hal March any amount of money. It cannot afford to pay a cameraman to take a picture of Chancellor Adenauer whose own services are free. I don't understand it and, even if I did, I would never forgive it.

The rebirth of Germany is both an inspiring and slightly frightening spectacle. This show dealt with both aspects. Yet the old Hitler pervaded the program. Most powerful moment of the show was a succession of shots of the audience watching, tense and almost knotted with concentration, a performance of "Diary of Anne Frank."

"Yet the guilt is not universal," commented Murrow, as the picture moved abruptly, almost shattering from "Diary of Anne Frank" to a German beer hall where the Germans roared out a drinking song.

There were shots of the new "Bundeswehr," which is supposedly democratized and humanized. Even in American type uniform, the Germans can't avoid that superman look.

Murrow and Friendly will continue somehow, somewhere, but "See It Now" is finished and with it an era ends.

I remember the first "See It Now" in Nov. 1951, when Murrow seated in a control room, ordered Camera 1 to "bring in the Atlantic Ocean."

then ordered the crew in San Francisco to bring in the Pacific. "We are impressed by a medium in which a man sitting in his living room has been able for the first time to look at two oceans at once."

Later the program almost ruined Sen. McCarthy—long before the Army-McCarthy hearings—by simply showing the man in his full flavor. It inspected Clinton, Tenn, integration program with agonizing humanity; it roamed through Korea; it dwelt on a major land scandal in Texas and the Texas editor who dug it up.

There have been some dull "See It Now" shows and some have been better than others but it is by every criterion television's most brilliant, most decorated, most imaginative, most courageous, and most important program. The fact that CBS cannot afford it but can afford "Beat the Clock" is shocking.

Fast with Buck

Always Busy, Busy

Life Hectic in Goldfine Bowl

By SAUL PETT

BOSTON (AP) — What kind of a man is Bernard Goldfine?

He is a big man in textiles, a fast man with a buck or a name or a vicuna or case of whisky.

He is a busy man, always rushing, always late, always in crisis. Life in the Goldfine bowl is frenetic and frequently complicated by the king fish stumbling over his own ego.

For example, if the ordinary individual wanted a particular U.S. government

ROME (UPI) — Premier Amintore Fanfani won a vote of confidence from the Italian Senate yesterday, the first of two hurdles necessary for approval of his new coalition cabinet.

The senate voted 128 to 111 in his favor, after a three-day debate.

The Christian Democratic premier faces a similar test in the Chamber of Deputies in about 10 days.

Winning Contract

BRIDGE QUIZ

Responding to partner's overcall is hugely different from responding to partner's opening bid, yet even experienced players sometimes misunderstand the distinction.

Today's quiz, covering action after partner has overcalled, is quoted from Charles Goren's new "Bridge Teacher's Manual."

This remarkable book breaks down the teaching of contract bridge into eleven two-hour lessons, including a first lesson which may be omitted if the course is to be given to any but beginners—who have never played the game. Although it is intended only for bridge teachers and priced (at $25) accordingly, it is the kind of thoroughgoing presentation which can convert any reasonably experienced player into a teacher of his friends or his family and no doubt will frequently be used for this purpose.

Your partner overcalls the dealer's opening heart bid with a bid of one spade. After right-hand opponent passes, what action do you take with each of the following hands?

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

(a) Pass. Do not offer a courtesy raise to partner's overcall.

(b) Bid two spades. Don't bid two diamonds; it is not forcing and the only purpose in bidding with this hand is to try for game in spades.

(c) Bid three spades. This hand is worth 13 points in support of spades. Note that three-card trump support is no bar to the jump raise when partner has overcalled. He can be counted on for a 5-card suit.

(d) Bid one no-trump. You have sufficient values for constructive action.

(e) Bid two no-trump. This jump is highly encouraging but not forcing. With any reasonable holding, partner can be expected to carry on.

(f) Pass. Do not rescue an overcall that has not been doubled. If you attempt to improve the spot, partner is apt to bid more spades, mistaking your bid as constructive in nature.

relax a case of 12-year-old whisky.

Why the roundabout way? Because Goldfine needs to be reminded he has friends and one proof of friendship is a favor.

Some men crave money; others, power, still others, fame. Goldfine may crave all three but the recurring motif in this man, running through his life in alternately comic and pathetic tones, is his need to be liked. Not just liked, but well liked.

U.S. Netters Defeat Canadian Cup Team

MIKE AGOSTINI nipped at tape

Today's Sports

SOFTBALL. The United States, which ramblled with a relatively inexperienced team, yesterday defeated Canada without the loss of a set by winning the doubles match at Toronto.

Baseball. The only tested player on the U.S. squad, and Sammy Giammalva conquered Bob Bedard and Don Fontana by a 6-1, 13-11, 6-4 score to pile up an insurmountable 34 lead in the best of five series. It was the 12th straight Davis Cup match victory for the United States over Canada.

The victory sent the U.S. into the final round of the North American zone competition against either Argentina or Israel.

Tennis. Monday's final two singles matches were reduced to exhibition status by the U.S. double triumph yesterday. The Canadian doubles champions gave the Americans a battle only in the long second set in which Bedard blew one set point.

Fontana and Bedard managed only three service breaks in the three sets, breaking Mackay's twice and cracking through on Giammalva in the final set. The Americans broke serve against the Canadian when they won.

JACK BURKE built up a record 54-hole score of 199 in taking a three-stroke lead in the Association City Open golf tournament yesterday. Burke took a third-round 64 for his 11 under par total and carries a three-stroke lead over Art Wall, who shot a scorching 65 yesterday.

Dan Nikles, a law student at the University of Florida, gained a 3 and 2 victory over Bob Ludlow, an Indianapolis gym teacher, in the finals of the U.S. public links golf tournament yesterday. Nikles was even par in 131 holes of match play in the gruelling tournament although he needed to win a playoff to qualify for the rugged grind.

Supporters of senior amateur hockey in Spokane said yesterday they plan to go ahead and enter a team in the Western International League next season despite a setback from the Coleman committee. The committee recommended that only the new Spokane Flyers of the professional WHA should be entered.

The Fitzroy River in Western Australia was not fully exposed until 1897.

Victoria Babe Ruth All-Stars Capture Berth in Island Final

Victoria Babe Ruth League All-Stars captured a berth in the final of the Vancouver Island championship tournament yesterday, defeating Cowichan All-Stars, 8-4, behind the fine six-hit pitching of Grant Udy.

Lake All-Stars of Youbou took the other opening-round game, scoring six runs in the second inning to defeat Victoria's Evening Optimist League All-Stars, 6-4, at Royal Athletic Park.

Youbou and Victoria League All-Stars meet today at 12:30 at Royal Athletic Park for the Vancouver Island championship and the right to play in the provincial tournament in Penticton July 24.

Cowichan and Evening Optimist All-Stars meet at 3 p.m. at Beacon Hill Park in a consolation game.

Udy, who batted 11 and walked only four, doubled home Victoria's first two runs in their big five-run second inning. Bruce Johnston, Bruce Morrison and Rod Fuller each rapped out a pair of hits for the winners, while Dave Rivers collected the longest blow of the game, a triple in the fourth inning.

Victoria turned in an errorless game afield and ran wild on the basepaths, chalking up 16 stolen bases.

Losing pitcher, Tom Moore, who was troubled by weakness, walked eight and hitting one.

Vern Pratt turned in a masterful relief job for the Evening Optimist All-Stars, coming on in the second-inning and pitching.

Youbou's six-run outburst proved too big to overcome as Tom Nicholson held Victoria to five hits striking out 11 and walking only four. Frank Clough provided the punch for Youbou, connecting for a double and triple in three trips.

Victoria Babe Ruth 8-4, 5-3, 6-4, 7-5, 8-6, 9-7, 10-8, 11-9, 12-10, 13-11, 14-12, 15-13, 16-14, 17-15, 18-16, 19-17, 20-18, 21-19, 22-20, 23-21, 24-22, 25-23, 26-24, 27-25, 28-26, 29-27, 30-28, 31-29, Busiest Whirl in Esquimalt

Busiest whirl in this area yesterday was home-made merry-go-round at special children's day at Esquimalt Memorial Park. Hundreds of youngsters enjoyed free spins on the colorful ride, built by Walter Holder, 1011 Caldwell Road. Rides last as long as it

Atlas Trial Stopped

Orange Flame, Then Nothing

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)—The Air Force called off the launching of its first fully powered Atlas intercontinental ballistic missile yesterday after its mighty engines ignited.

For the first time, the huge rocket carried the three engines necessary to travel intercontinental range, the main sustainer and two rocket boosters.

The engines poured out a huge stream of orange flame for some 10 seconds after the crucial countdown reached the zero mark. Then they were shut down.

The Air Force made an immediate announcement in connection with the crash.

The new Atlas, towering more than 85 feet high, built up more than 3,000,000 pounds of thrust on the stand. The missile reportedly was to be fired at a range of 2,500 miles to test the performance of the propulsion system.

All Three Engines Fired Up

It was the most powerful missile ever poised on a launching pad at the test centre here.

'Reasonable Deal' Sought for Fliers

WASHINGTON (AP)—The the Reds may specify for having United States yesterday held open the door to a reasonable deal with the Soviet Union and East Germany for the release of nine U.S. airmen held in East Germany since early last month.

The State Department officials said the U.S. government has no intention of ransom the men with virtual recognition of East Germany. That is what the East Germans and the Russians are seeking.

The price is far too high in the State Department's view, because it would not only hurt U.S. prestige but upset American relations with West Germany and possibly endanger the vital position of the Western powers in Berlin.

Moscow was put on notice late Friday that the United States fears the dispute will grow into a first class row. At the same time, Washington said it is ready to meet any "normal and reasonable requirements" which

Britons Embarrassed

By Discrimination

U.K. Bill to Erase Color Bar

LONDON (AP)—Britain's Negro discrimination problem is before the House of Commons in a bill making it illegal to apply the color bar in dance halls, restaurants or hotels.

Immigrant Negroes from American Negro women who British colonies have become a reservation. Not only Negroes but Pakistanis and visitors from India often have trouble finding a place to live.

To most Britons the incidents are all the more embarrassing because the United States has been shown no mercy here in discussion of its segregation problem, especially the Little Rock situation.

The color problem lay well under the surface in Britain until a few months ago, when a business slump and an influx of poor West Indians anxious for jobs brought it fully into view.

In some places even labor unions, who to do themselves no harm, left their doors open to Negroes in such jobs as bus conductors.

The House of Commons bill against discrimination was introduced as a private measure, that will be another big step according to their consciences with no party recommendations.

Swim Students Learn Quickly In First Week

By MARGIE SAYSMITH (Colonist Staff Writer)

Here we are well on our second week of Colonist learn-to-swim lessons and from what I have seen so far there are going to be some fine new swimmers in this area.

Just about all of you have done well with the kicking and breathing exercises, were viewing and it looks like you have all been putting in the needed practice.

The new work last week was "gliding" and that's pretty close to swimming right there.

Wednesday the first of the three week classes will start what we call arm swinging and that will be another big step on becoming a capable swimmer.

Just hope the weatherman continues to cooperate as well as he has so far because to date the conditions have been just about perfect all along the line.

I've heard some good reasons why some of you are having trouble with learning to breathe properly while swimming. But even the best who said he was frightened of water because he had been turned a garden hose full on him while he was asleep, is getting the hang of it with practice.

On thing I'd like to remind parents. There are a few youngsters who about bringing a shopping bag to keep clothes in and we have had some bag hunts for clothing left lying around house.

So please remember, this point. One paper shopping bag inside another does fine for a clothes bag.

Just hope the weatherman continues to cooperate as well as he has so far because to date the conditions have been just about perfect all along the line.

VICTORIA PRESS, BOX 1808

JERRY COSLEY JOINS QUALITY PRESS LIMITED

Jerry Cosley, well-known figure about Victoria, has joined the long-established printing and lithographing firm, Quality Press Limited, as salesman and printing adviser.

Jerry brings to his new position the knowledge gained from more than 25 years of experience in the printing trade as a compositor and estimator.

He has been actively engaged in the trade in Victoria for the past eleven years, and was for fifteen years engaged by Westminster Press, England, as manager of their commercial printing department and is well-qualified to advise and assist in designing layouts for brochures, folders, letterheads and all types of business forms.

Jerry is a veteran of the R.A.F. and is well known for his "Smile Show," and other community efforts.

He will be welcomed by the business community of Victoria as much for his civic mindedness as for his knowledge of all phases of printing.

Phone Jerry at 3-4612 for solution of your printing problems.

Peek at Comics

VICTORIA (CP)—Princess Margaret had time only for a brief glance at the newspaper comics and a few puffs on a

Carr, who piloted the RCAF C-5, described the trip as "perfect."

The plane carried two stewards but they were not required to serve the royal party during the 25-minute trip.

Stewards were Capt. Percy Atkinson of Nova Scotia and Sgt. Jerry Mignault of Quebec.

When the princess and her party left the aircraft, they left the funnies, a bookie giving the C-5 schedule for the rest of the tour, a map of B.C. and a part package of cigarettes.

The flight was too short for Sgt. Mignault or his assistant to meet the princess.

Wing Commander Carr said he had to slow the plane to about 200 miles per hour to "kill a little time" and avoid arriving ahead of a scheduled 10 a.m. landing.

The converted North Star usually cruises at 280 miles an hour.

ROME—Roberto Rossellini took his children to the beach and then conferred with lawyers on their future following the annulment of his marriage with Ingrid Bergman.

The Italian director and his former Swedish wife were reported in complete accord over sharing their children in spite of the annulment.

The big Britannia, specially fitted for the trip, now will go back into regular service until it goes to Halifax to pick up the Princess and her party at the end of their Canadian tour.

Pamela Crowther, personal attendant to the Princess, said she ate the same meals as the end of their Canadian tour.

"She got a good look at B.C. from 26,000 feet, west from the Rockies. The sky was gin-clear until we flew over the Coastal Mountains," he said.

"The Princess told me she really enjoyed the smoothness and quiet of the Britannia," he said. She got up just about two hours before we landed.

Royal Plane Pilot Flew 'Little More Delicately'

VANCOUVER (CP)—Senior crew members I don't think I can tell you anything more. Capt. Percy, a veteran of the North Pole in a BOAC Atlantic flying, said the Princess Britannia and landed here early Saturday said he flew the huge plane "a little more delicately than usual."

It was his first royal flight in 25 years as an airline captain with BOAC.

"The Princess told me she really enjoyed the smoothness and quiet of the Britannia," he said. She got up just about two hours before we landed.

Union Votes Car Strike If Needed

DETROIT (AP)—The United Auto Workers' Union said yesterday that its members at big Three plants so far have voted 93.5 percent in favor of authorizing strike action if necessary to win contract demands.

The union will resume negotiations with General Motors, Ford and Chrysler Monday following a nine-day recess.

BIG MAJORITY

While 158 out of 220 locals reporting, the total vote stood at 17,992 in favor of strike action and 12,129 against, the union said.

UAW leaders expect to complete the strike votes at all big Three plants later this month.

The union's largest local, No. 600, at Ford's River Rouge plant will start voting Monday. It will take five days to complete the vote. The local has more than 30,000 members.

LETTER SENT

The UAW meanwhile made public a letter it sent Rep. Charles E. Chamberlain (R-Mich.) asking him to intercede with General Motors Corp. in behalf of a union proposal for a poll of GM workers on the kind of labor contract they prefer.

UAW Vice-President Leonard Woodcock said the "poll" would determine whether GM employees favor an extension for two years of the wage formula of the 1955 contract. The poll would be conducted by the Honest Ballot Act.

The UAW made the same proposal to General Motors the night of May 29 just before the 1955 contract expired. GM rejected it.

Press Meets Princess

They Were Spellbound

By BARNEY MCKINLEY

Princess Margaret won the hearts of more than 300 newsmen and women during a 70-minute visit with the press yesterday.

During the reception in the Georgian Lounge of the Empress Hotel the soft-spoken smiling princess shook the hand of everyone present and later chatted with most of the newspaper wire service, radio, and television men and women in the crowded room.

The spell she cast over the gathering was obvious from the moment the petite and smiling princess came into the room accompanied by Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. Frank Ross.

There was a spontaneous surge in her direction and lines formed quickly as she stood in a receiving line to shake hands with everyone present, smiling often and directly.

Later the spell was made fast when she moved slowly about the room conversing briefly and generously with almost everyone present.

She talked readily and easily with all, occasionally sharing a laugh and pausing often to chat with press representatives from across Canada and from the U.S.

Suddenly bashful reporters and cameramen were put at ease by Princess Margaret's clip on the left shoulder of her gown.

DAILY COLONIST MAGAZINE

VICTORIA, B.C., SUNDAY, JULY 13, 1958

Her Royal Highness
the Princess Margaret

Today's a Guest of the People of British Columbia,
Lending Her Gracious
Presence to the Celebration of

THE FIRST
STATEHOOD

Nobody could call The British Colonist of 90 years ago a sensation-sheet. The four-page newspaper, published three times weekly, and the forerunner of today's daily Colonist, was conservative in its display of news—but liberal in its policies.

However, the case of the white bloodchurn was a little out of the ordinary, warranted display. The pity of it is so little is known about her. Even her name is lacking. And what the girl's fate may have been, it is sad to contemplate.

This is The British Colonist's little story of July 13:

As a matter of fact, Victoria police court was a busy place those days, what with hopelessly intoxicated citizens being picked up out of taverns and clubs, and their petition for one way or another in the course of their celebrations. One man, for example, became quite tipsy and severely gashed his face when he fell drunk off a sidewalk. His case was dismissed, the disappointed people that he already had paid for his legal.

And there was William Rogers, who once it took the proprietor of the Larkin Hotel a Mr. Wiley with a knife.

He was charged in due course. But Wiley, who must have been a very notable character, did not press the charge. He had been able to do him, the character in both cases, and had given him a lesson in self-defense. The magnanimous Rogers decided to return to California, where things were not so tough.

But the next case was another.

that day. He had hit John Clark on the head with a rock and given him a kicking, to which she spoke. His wife, a white woman, said she had been prepared to help her husband if he had been beaten. It was because of the insulting behavior of the white man that her help wasn't needed. She said she would have to produce $10 to pay her husband, however.

Angelo, charged with a $25 customs house fine, was finally able to raise £2,000 bail.

British Consul hinted darkly his case would come to trial, although he had been dropped at earlier hearings.

not all. They had paid as much as £250 for holdings unimproved by their owners who were still to all intents and purposes Indian land. Some of them wanted 1,000-acre blocks.

Said the government: If 300 men come forward, read fortunes expressing a desire to clear and till the Crown's empty acres, 'the Indians' title to the land will be extinguished and families afflicted by poverty will be able to live.

It was to be left to the Assembly to fix a price for the land.

Members of the Legislative Assembly were urging reduction in the price of land to $125 an acre. It had been as much as $2.

Cultural survivors, according to Despard Pemberton, a Crown surveyor, was there for an attack on these titles. And the Indians if some got nothing that day, was simply extinguished.

Well, the government was coming for genuine farmers to present themselves, already a score

The first voters' list was in process of compilation. There was a right of challenge but the franchise situation generally was far from the perfected operation which evolved.

Anyone elected to the House of Assembly had to sign a declaration, if he wanted to take his seat, affirming: "I do solemnly and sincerely declare that I have not, myself, or by any means through any agents, persons or person, employed bribery or treating or used any undue influence to procure my election as a member of the House of Assembly of Vancouver's Island."

But the chances are that in Whitehall and a Russo-ghian Palace there are very much concerned with what nation they gain the Easter Eve town.

Gorbodol was preaching against Austria, and the Italian states, even by way of emigration from under the Vittoria, and becoming a common kingdom. Fodor was strong to the Emperor was possessing a military culture, with a view of France and half of the U. S. S. and for the rest of the world a quiet influence on the world's main pressure and the security of her trade and the laborers.

As a matter of fact it wasn't too bad riding around in the Austin after that with the top torn open and the gear smashed in like a boxer's nose. It was still giving a compulsive start at the sight of a car even though it seemed to have quit actually stopping at them.

So I was close to forgetting the adventure of the Upper Valley when suddenly one day in a strange way he lulled me into a sense of false security. I was wrong again.

The Austin spent six weeks in the garage after its conversion from a sedan.

"I don't like the sound of that engine, though," the garage man told me as I was about to drive away. "If you get in front of me, I'll tell you why."

When I got out on the first-hour traffic line, the engine didn't sound right to me either and I am a man who doesn't insist a motor has to purr.

Before I had gone three blocks the Austin was humming like a jet engine, and I felt the smoke. "Does it try to fly?" I asked the garage man and in a flash

THE TURBINE WHINED and the kerosene fired up with a roar as the jet quivered at its calks on the flight line at RCAF Station, Comox, Vancouver Island.

Under instruction, but at the controls of the slender T-33 trainer was a slim, 43-year-old flight lieutenant, wearing pilot's wings and a double row of ribbons on his tunic.

Flight Lieutenant John K. Gault is a Protestant padre with the United Church of Canada with an understanding of all three persuasions and their families that is a result of personal experience seldom granted clergy men of the faith.

His life has been an amazing combination of resistance and acceptance of change.

Although interested in a business of his own, a law practice the depression years didn't offer much scope for either and Padre Gault continued to sell and fit men's suits and socks.

Then the Second World War broke out and the whole pattern of his life changed overnight.

In the fall of 1940, with England at the mercy of the German parades that seemed to be the main role of the main depository.

Padre Gault wound up with money in his hands, less than a dust from heaven to join in the depot floor.

And that was previous experience as a Protestant priest, nearly lost in the U.S. flycatcher and lost forever.

As soon as the fog cleared, the Coast Squadron, which was in the area, saw the ship and, according to the report, saw her as a battle ship. On arrival in Halifax, Padre Gidde was given special permission to fly low over the city as a salute to their home country.

"I really wound it up over the bay and came in over the city just too low—about 75 feet," he recalled with a grin. "They'd never seen a Lancaster there before and wanted a close look at one for the newspapers."

Then in front of the crowd at the airport the padre admitted he made the worst landing in his life. "I thought it would never stop bouncing," he said, and I'm sure it must have looked terrible in the newscasts.

Padre Goldie decided to accept his discharge from the AF in 1947 and "last to get my feet on the ground." He turned a job in a lumber yard.

It didn't last for long and he decided to see if he was still a good salesman. Only this time he decided to sell soap.

"Believe me that soap selling is a tough business, but I feel quite well," the former Squad 10 leader said. "They told me I was a natural salesman."

But by this time Padre Goldie, age 30, knew what he wanted to do and under the direction of veterans' affairs representative plan, he decided to return to school.

CHARLES BEDFORD YOUNG was one of those thousands who came to Victoria a century ago this month, pitched his tent, so to speak, decided to stay, and became a power in this place for many years.

Among his pals was Amor de Cosmos, four-fer, owner, editor and publisher of The British Colonist. Mr. Young and Mr. de Cosmos were sometimes not of speaking terms, but then they would forget their differences and appear at the public ball or form supporting each other.

Another of Mr. Young's pals was Thomas Harris, Victoria's first mayor in 1862.

It was quite a trio of power and persuasiveness.

Mr. Young, however, was one often was at a dinner table with James Douglas, then the governor, and the other members of the executive council. They were all of them, when they were together, but there was no room for Douglas in the room.

But next day in the poll the voters put Mr. Young at the bottom of the poll and elected Mr. Harris.

A few years later, Mr. Young tried again, this time backed by Mr. de Cosmos.

He had been anxious to get in a party that night, but would not do so until he had a very good reason to oppose Mr. Young as a reason to the voters.

Mr. Young came forward and was greeted with a few cheers. He had been elected of being elected, and away he went to the polls.

It was a fantastic election. The contest between George Crank and C. B. Young for the representation of the city came off yesterday and resulted in a victory for the latter.

The day of nomination came in the old Fort and Mr. Young was there still saving he would not go.

Much said to see, therefore, when Thomas Harris, the first mayor, came upon the steps and introduced in a brief speech to the electors, C. B. Young as a representative of the city.

James Harris, the first mayor, was the first to speak, and he was followed by Mr. Young, who was the first to be elected.

Mr. Young, being called upon to speak, delivered a short but eloquent address in which he said that he was a free man, free to think and free to act, and that he was a free man, free to think and free to act.

In the yard of old Fort Victoria, the sheriff counted the votes in spectacular elections, notable for their rowdy character.

BRAVEST of ALL

By Lieut. Col. John Baker White

THERE ARE TWO GOOD REASONS why I give his name simply as "ANDRE." One of them will become evident in the telling of his story. The other is that it is not the practice of the British—or the French—intelligence services to disclose the names of their former agents, unless they choose to do so themselves. And Andre does not.

Here, in the campaign that with stony country of sheep and stony men, the tale of the French Andre is told as a story of a brave man who, in the face of the long and hard work of the British intelligence service, was the first to see the light of day. Andre was the first to see the light of day. Andre was the first to see the light of day.

Andre was the first to see the light of day. Andre was the first to see the light of day. Andre was the first to see the light of day. Andre was the first to see the light of day. Andre was the first to see the light of day.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Listed in Gestapo files as "a very dangerous man," 36-year-old Lieut. Col. John Baker White has studied the techniques of subversion and counter-espionage for more than 30 years.

Before the Second World War he worked in two books, "Red Russia Arms" and "The Red Network," of the power of the Soviet Army and the international growth of Communism.

Since 1918 he has written six more books, including "The Big Lie," revealing how deception was used as a weapon during the war; "Pattern for Conquest," dealing with world-wide Communist activities; "The Soviet Spy System" and "Sabotage Is Suspect."

During the war Colonel White served first with the British regiment, the Rifle Brigade, then with Military Intelligence, the Political Intelligence Department of the Foreign Office and the Political Warfare Executive. He left the army in November, 1945.

Member of Parliament for Canterbury from 1950 to 1953, he was obliged to give up his seat on medical advice, because of the recurrence of a spinal injury caused when parachuting on active service.

LETTER FROM LONDON

With Vancouver Island Worried By Strike Isolation

PERRYFIELD, England—"That's something in the land transport that ought to interest the government of British Columbia." The speaker was a Canadian; but because he was a civil servant he did not wish to be quoted by name. "It would have made a world of difference to Vancouver Island these last few weeks."

He had come across from France by the silver City car ferry. The flight from Calais had taken 20 minutes. Less than an hour after leaving on a French road he was riding away on an English road. In that time his baggage had been handled, not unloaded and two custom forms completed, passport examined and immigration satisfied.

The cost was equivalent to $11.

At the height of the summer tourist season the British Bristol Weymouth line and take off every two minutes of the day maintain a monotonous drone across the English Channel to Calais, La Touquet and Ostend. The service varies from 22 to 36 minutes travelling time from 20 to 30 minutes.

For consistency and regularity the channel car ferriers make the famous British midland route strangely expedited for efficiency. The same ferry will carry a bicycle for 30c and motor for 40c or motor for $2.40. There is accommodation for 17 passengers for $8.50.

Started less than 10 years ago as an experimental service, it has grown to the point where it has carried more than 200,000 autos, 10,000 motor cycles, 700,000 passengers. One-way it cost $110 to fly a car across the channel and a few pence to travel than wait three weeks for a sea crossing. There have been reduced consistently during the years. Next year they may compete in price with the sea ferries still unable to cope promptly with summer traffic.

No successful line has been the operation of the ferry service. Silver City, the first and largest, is the only one to have lost its way. The company found the difficulties insurmountable mainly because of political considerations and established interests. Technically, I am told, an air freighter service between the island and the mainland is operationally ideal. The most economical distances for efficient operation are between 24 and 25 miles.

Silver City, in addition to carrying vehicles, does a big business in general freighting. hour have never killed or injured anyone in a decade a remarkable tribute to a service which is still in operation. The car ferries turned to carrying passengers and without which many people would be unable to take their cars to Europe where they want to. The sea ferry gets their keep on Vancouver Island.

AIR FERRIES THE ANSWER?

While one aircraft is refueling, another waits for a load, and a third takes off for France. There's similar activity across the Channel and perhaps two or three more airplanes a day. That's the way efficient air ferry service operates out of Great Britain.

plus tourist passenger traffic. Air passengers travel on the same airplane as their vehicles. Fuel, comprehensive insurance and landing taxes are included in the fares so there are no tips and no extras.

Vehicle charges are according to weight. There is no extra charge for luggage provided it does not project higher than 6 feet 6 inches from the ground if it is packed on a road carrier. Gas tanks may be three quarters full in consideration as fuel in France is more expensive than in Britain.

I understand that certain inquiries were made about the inauguration of a similar ferry from the mainland to Vancouver Island but the operators found the difficulties insurmountable mainly because of political considerations and established interests.

The article reproduced in this issue of The Islander is taken from the book and will be followed by two others, giving intimate glimpses of the Princess' life.)

Gowned for an official function, HER ROYAL HIGHNESS looks the story-book Princess.

MARGARET—the princess with the hour-glass figure and eyes of all times to be the most consistently best-dressed member of the Royal Family.

She is lucky that nature endowed her with such fine physical proportions. Most other women must first dress themselves to attain it, even they do.

Whether 190 pounds or five feet one inch tall and hers is a 21-22 waist.

She uses makeup sparingly, adapted to her complexion, and pale pink lipstick, blue standard hair, and a pearl necklace.

Her dress is always elegant and in so many styles as to defy the theory that royalty should dress conservatively.

When Princess Margaret first appeared at a West End theatre with her hair worn in a sophisticated style, it was a sensation. Her family were horrified. She said it was a mistake to have replaced the old style of hair, but she had worn it since childhood.

Women who say her hair is a disgrace remarked that the hair had to be styled like a wig. It moves her hair and she is somebody commented from the crowd.

Charles, comes out all the time she dresses with the first lady of the land. At home, paying particular attention to the way it meets to various body positions, from a head turn, the wind blow her skirt over her head and she never forgets it.

Most of Margaret's daytime clothes are designed by Sir John Galsworthy. She has to wear in the home a dress of Miss Fort. Her evening dresses are by the same designer. Her evening gowns are made of silk and satin, for great and often of a light color, for the less formal appearance. The dresses are of the established morning dress style, but with a "tail" and "box" bottom, and a full skirt. Even her skirt has a subtle change in the way it is cut, and in the way it is worn.

She is not a fan of the night to wear what she wears in the day. She has a great variety of formal dresses, and a great variety of informal dresses. She has a great variety of short full skirts, and a great variety of long full skirts.

One of her most sensational long line numbers was a flower-patterned silk afternoon gown with a straight bodice dipping into a large bow tied to fall below the hip.

Margaret's choice for evening wear is often influenced by the brilliant sash of a royal order, which often has to be worn. This explains why so many of her gowns are white.

These special evening dresses are never worn very often and when their usefulness has been served, pearls, rhinestones and other precious trimmings are carefully removed. Then what is left of the gown is burned.

CLOTHES-OF-STATE must never be worn by anyone not entitled to do so. Margaret's day clothes are just as carefully guarded and even when she tires of them are never given away. The risk of their being commercialized and infringing on the royal dignity is too great. Instead they are taken to pieces and the material sent to charitable organizations.

Of course the princess wears her older dresses in the privacy of Clarence House, especially if she is expecting to wear extra hard at her peak.

She does not discard her tweeds. Year after year they come out for the Scottish holidays at Balmoral and the battle of Mey. They are also useful for certain days at the races.

On such informal occasions her favorite is a grey tweed skirt with a white blouse. She also has a standby in a three-quarter length natural cashmere coat, worn with a bright red headscarf tied at the throat.

She simply loves silk headscarves, especially those printed with amusing decorations. They are kept on a shelf in her wardrobe in a specially labelled box.

Princess Margaret was the first member of the Royal Family to wear a calf length evening dress, and today when dining at home never wears the full-length kind.

Her nightgown parties usually spent in some offbeat place. She has a collection of informal dresses including an all black creation with ballet neckline and short full skirt.

Once as a teenager a black evening gown led her into the water. She was the first and last time to a movie premiere only to read in a newspaper next morning that the water wonder if it had once belonged to a work model. Since then she has chosen black gowns only worn out to youthful designs.

MAN of the MOUNTAINS

While living and working in Victoria, Howard O'Hagan suffered considerably with arthritis. He'd spend hours in Beacon Hill Park and to the ducks, he was a familiar. Recovered, he's on the move again. Back to the mountains, probably.

Carol called one from the hospital in New York where she has a starting job in "Blue Devils" and to find out if her mother misses her as one of the first friends I noticed. What I then found was to find out she said:

"I've been a model for so long that I've tried not to make the mistake of overcompensating myself. I would rather not become that overly groomed."

"Being a professional gives you discipline," Carol continued. I knew how to do that very quickly. I shampooed it easily every day and let it dry naturally. I wash it in the shower with a brand shampoo that I've used for years. I know they say you should change around for best results but I have no desire to."

Carol confessed that her beauty problems were rather typical of most teen-agers.

I think most girls in their teens have complexion and weight problems. I use make-up in my work and I thought maybe that was the reason my skin was breaking out. Mother took me to a dermatologist who gave me some tests and advised me to use no cosmetic make-up.

"He gave me a medicated soap that really helped my skin. One thing he told me was not to use a wash cloth but to wash my hands well in soap and water and when I was sure they were clean to make a lather of the soap and wash my face."

When you use a wash cloth more than once, there is always the chance of bacteria being on it and this may spread any infection.

"There is nothing better for your skin than to keep it clean," Carol advised. "And I'm very careful to wash my face with very hot water until I know all the makeup is off. Then I splash it with cold water until I'm sure I've closed the pores."

"I used to eat I told sweets," she confessed, "but the doctor put me on a diet, because he said you had to treat your skin from the inside as well as from the outside."

I had to give up cakes, sundaes, cookies and candy bars. He told me to avoid fried foods and to eat very few starches.

"Did you find this hard to do?" I asked.

"Mother got me candy bars from the health-food store. This helped me so much because I love sweets so. This candy is made of sesame seeds and honey and has only 60 calories. It isn't fattening and it gives you energy."

"When I'm modeling I often have to eat on the run, and that is where I missed my chocolate bars the most. But now I eat an apple and one of the health bars."

"Nutritional experts are severe critics of teenage eating habits," I remarked.

"They're right. Snacks can ruin your appetite and hot dogs and potato chips are not very nourishing. I know it's best to have planned menus but I don't always manage it."

"Most photos of models don't show that they have such a hard time doing it," Patricia exclaimed. "I asked."

"Sometimes I have to refuse," Carol said. "But I can use weight and stay too well over 100 pounds a day. I don't have a set plan, but I know what to choose so that I don't feel hungry."

"I like to have grapefruit, hard-boiled eggs, steak, steak or any sort of meat, vegetables, fresh fruit and multiple vitamins," she rattled off.

Carol becomes popular with the word "dietary" so quickly in reference to the young set.

"It's been proven that if young models are kept busy with sports, work or other activities they don't have time to get into trouble."

Carol doesn't have a desire to grow up too fast. She didn't wear lipstick until she was 14. "I'm just now getting to how to walk on the runway," she told me. "I don't wear a corset, the new hip high boots are very flattering to your legs and ankles. I've seen a fashion model that's soon to be, am going to become as successful as the shape of her legs as they are about the size of a wrist."

In putting I asked Carol if she felt she had missed much by becoming a model girl so young.

"No," she answered quickly. "I've got and more what I wanted to do and I've got to do that."

Maybe back to his beloved mountains, or Mexico where brands is cheap and rewards plentiful. Or perhaps, Puerto Rico to join his wife Margaret Peterson a fine contemporary artist with an international reputation.

The docks in Beacon Hill Park will miss Howard O'Hagan. He's spent most of his spare time in the park in the eighteen months he's lived in Victoria.

And who is Howard O'Hagan?

He's a transient, testy Canadian writer with several chips on his shoulder, whose work is honest, sensitive, virile and usually a bit nostalgic.

Howard can fuss over a misplaced comma more than any other writer I know, raise a ruckus over a full stop, and he abominates semicolons.

His work has appeared in "slick" magazines such as Esquire and Maclean's, top ranking "pulp" like True, and all sorts of "long hair" quarterlies. His new book "Wilderness Men" to come out this summer, is being published by Doubleday and he's under contract to them for his next.

He's lived in Montreal, England, the Argentine, Australia, New York, California, Mexico and upland. But always he manages to go back between whiles to the Rocky Mountains about which he writes with such passion.

Delicately built, with a growly voice, blond complexion, light blue eyes and reddish, tufty eyebrows he's apt to pull crusty, hairless, dark eyebrows as Margaret Park can at their night scene "Tropic" purchased in a New Mexico quarterly and broadcast later over CBC and The White Horse dramatized by CBC.

Educated at McGill, Howard O'Hagan, appeared in political scenes and economics as well as Stephen Leacock. He considers Leacock, whose work and personality he admired enormously, the most valuable.

He was never called to the bar, though he practised law quite illegally in Jasper one summer.

Then Leacock got the CPR to send him to England to persuade farm labourers to emigrate to Canada though he knew little about labour and still less about farming.

Before leaving for England and the job, he was interviewed by Sir Edward Beatty, president of the CPR.

So pleased was he at the reception he got from the president of one railway he decided he'd drop in on the top man of his rival the CNR.

"What can I do for you, young man?" asked Sir Henry Thornton.

"Make a decision as to which you'd have as mountain base for your railway, Lucerne or Jasper," said the young man.

It was apparently the first time Sir Henry had heard about the local claims of the two mountain branches but helped out by Howard O'Hagan's knowledge of the terrain he decided for Jasper. Two weeks later the inhabitants of Lucerne chairman of the Argentine Central Railway. Later Lord Forbes invited him to London and offered him a publicity job in Argentina. 'Bandits are shooting at our trains down there,' said his lordship. 'Go and stop them.'

O'Hagan not only stopped the shooting but made the railway popular.

As he didn't really enjoy publicity work, and wanted to write, when at the end of three years his contract was up, he refused to renew it and started back to the Rockies, travelling royally in a private car courtesy of his late employer by way of Bolivia and Lake Titicaca.

'I'll never forget the beauty of Lake Titicaca in the moonlight with the Andes in the background,' he told me.

It was in Berkeley, Calif., he started to write Sigourney. Years before on a short visit to Australia he'd written and sold a fiction story called Sig. It was about a cowboy from the Caribbe. Since the

In Berkeley he started to find fame in earnest and has been at it ever since. "Of course, I've got reflections. Who hasn't?" but they've never been reflection tips. Editors have always had to trouble to write "Now here, and Howard Ollagan has an act and I know only success."

It was at a party in Berkeley that the attractive, talented, handsome 21-year-old began his work. There he met a lot of places, so then he turned the party over.

Whether made by a queen or by a poor housewife, facts are popular fare. Today I have made facts fit for a queen of a princess and in honor of our Royal visitor I have called them the 10 Princess Marguerite.

Facts. This is how to make them.

Mix together one-third cup white sugar, one-quarter cup butter, and one egg. Cream well. Add one-quarter cup of moist sugar. Add one-half cup of sifted salt. One teaspoon baking powder and one-half teaspoon soda stirred in one by one. Mix well. Bake in a hot oven for 20 minutes.

This is a very soft pie, and hard to handle. It is very good. Have a good floured board and a rolling pin, and roll out and cut with a round or round cutter. Bake in a shallow pan. You may be tempted to leave it too long, but it is better to have it a little underdone than overdone.

about ten minutes or until golden brown. The joints will puff up and almost enclose the filling.

When cold and just before serving, put a puff of almost flavored whipped cream on top of each tart. If you prefer you may use a little of the filling on top of each tart. The only thing to watch is not to use too much. These tarts are very delicious.

There are a few other pies that are very perfect, especially for parties. I will give you a few of them.

You can make them plain as a Quaker's bunnet or elegant as a velvet gown.

Puff pstry makes a tart really special. A simple version for the beginner is as follows: so . . . First mix a standard pie crust. You will find a recipe for this in book. Roll out the pastry and butter. Use a third of a cup butter. Spread the top with the butter. Bake for 20 minutes. You can make a fancy tart with a variety of fillings. Now into the bottom of each tart put half a teaspoon of blanched and shivered almonds and on top a spoonful of raspberry jam. Bake in a preheated 400-degree oven for

Once Again Scots Will Run 'Dingle'

By DOROTHY WROTNOWSKI

It is nice to think that the original owner of The Dingle on Gorge Road, the late Charles William Ringler Thomson, would have been pleased could he have known that a Scottish group, the St. Andrew's and Caledonian Society, would be holding their centennial project on his property.

For Ringler Thomson, who came to the new country from his native Scotland was a public spirited man and in the early days took part in many ventures. He was interested in the first waterworks at Maple Ridge and earned the nickname "Gas Works" Thomson by being one of those instrumental in installing the first gas works.

The Thomsons who lived at Maple Ridge (now part of Vancouver) No. 2, built their home on the Gorge in the mid '80s. Although the 11-ton Bay grant of 10 acres of land on which the house stands was made about 1852, the 40 acres is still intact although it now also houses the Redwood Park Motel.

LOT ENTERTAINING

Like the many others who owned large homes along the Gorge, the Thomsons did a lot of entertaining. Mrs. Ringler Thomson was noted on May 21 to watch the coronation of George and during the summer there would be parties on the lawn featuring music and water.

So it is fitting that the Scottish group will hold its centennial garden party here on Saturday, July 19. There will be a fashion show staged on a ramp built around the swimming pool where staid will be set up. On the lawn, near the house, tea will be served and games for both adults and children will be set up around the grounds where a giant old sequoia (redwood) tree dominates the scene.

WISHING WELL

The original stone well will be transformed into a wishing well where the coins will be gathered later to give for work with cerebral palsy victims.

Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Nordal, present owners of Redwood Park Motel and The Dingle, who are leaving their place for the season, have done a big job of restoring the old place since acquiring the property in February, 1956.

The exterior of the house is painted a sparkling white with a front door of bright blue which Mrs. Nordal says means a welcome in Europe. The wide front porch is new and of cement although it rests on the original brick foundations.

MAJOR CHANGES

But it is the interior of the house where the major changes have taken place bringing it into line for modern living minus serv. The main and summer kitchens at the back (north) end of the house are now the famous playroom, much used by Kenneth and Vicki Nordal.

The east wing originally the servants' hall and main dining room is now the Nordals' drawing room. The adjoining wall was knocked out and one of the 12 original fireplaces vaulted up to make

Canadian Whisky Galore

TORONTO (NANA)—It's whisky galore and a whisky war now that Canadian rye has taken the offensive against Britain's Scotch and America's bourbon.

Canadian producers say whisky has become the world's "smartest" drink. They cite France, where today it is considered too chic to serve whisky despite that country's store of cognac and wine — and despite the French government's efforts to save foreign currency by slapping hefty taxes on British, American and Canadian whisky imports.

Competition is keenest for richest whisky market in the world — the U.S. Canada this year is exporting 10,500,000 gallons south of the border, three times the previous figure. During the same period Scotch whisky imports into America from Britain have amounted to about 12,300,000 gallons yearly.

These Things Will Happen Watch Closely for Them

By JIMMY CANNON

Things sure to happen this summer.

At a summer camp the boy who can't swim will be thrown off the dock.

The bathing cap worn by the girl with the marvelous hair will spring a leak.

Your old girl will show up at the week-end house party.

The air conditioning system at the motel will break down in the middle of the night.

The only person your wife will hate at the office picnic will be your boss.

The guest who raids the ice box will drink every drop of the breakfast milk.

On the beach a woman will slap a hawking child and run that part of the day.

The couple who brag about their happiness will quarrel about the wife's interest in a college-kid hotel bus boy.

A guy who can't find any place and can't find any one to go with will tell you today that his apartment is the greatest summer resort.

A romance will end because a pretty girl gets sick on a roller coaster in an amusement park.

On the porch of every expensive hotel, a man will describe his recent trip to Europe.

The couple that took the hottest advice and bought only sports clothes will be embarrassed by the formal wear of the other house guests.

The wife will say we should have gone to the state of you go to the mountains.

The wife will say we should have gone to the mountains if you go to the state.

Folks who never have more than fruit juice and coffee every morning will go for five-course breakfasts.

The girl who says she tans and never burns will have to be treated by a physician after lolling on the beach.

A man on the terrace of a penthouse will turn to his waiting guests and say this is cooler than any beach.

A beach athlete will race by and kick sand in junior's eye.

You won't discover you've forgotten to pack the sand which will ruin the picnic grounds.

People who rise early to get an early start will find the roads clogged with the cars of people getting an early start.

One of your party will make a toe in the softball game.

No one will heed the life-guard's warning until he has to swim out and get someone pulled down by the undertow.

A middle-aged man will spend the weekend when he collapses playing tennis.

The guy with the ulcer will discover that the big deal of the weekend is a weiner roast on the beach.

Young folks will think it's funny when their volleyball plunks into the layer cake at the picnic spread at the beach.

A guy will bring his wife along on the stag fishing trip on the grounds "she's just like one of the guys."

A father will feel his years for the first time when his teenage daughter is the belle of the Saturday night hotel dance.

Died Saturday

Gillespie Funeral Tuesday

Mrs. Marjorie Thorne Gillespie, wife of Donald L. Gillespie, died Saturday.

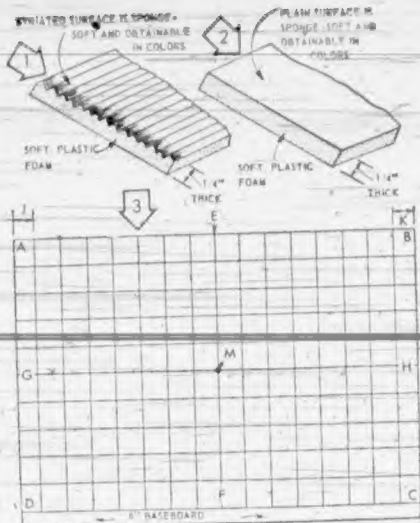

Distillers Corporation (Canada) Ltd. died yesterday morning in Royal Jubilee Hospital.

Born in Winnipeg in 1888, Mrs. Gillespie had lived in British Columbia 17 years and in Victoria for the past 10 years.

Surviving besides her husband are two sons, John D. Gooderham of West Vancouver, William G. Gooderham of Courtenay; a daughter, Mrs. C. Crothers, Carpenter of Victoria; and two sisters, Mrs. L. J. H. Redmond and Mrs. Geoffrey Macdonald of Winnipeg.

Funeral services will be held at 11 a.m. Tuesday in St. George-the-Martyr Anglican Church, Cadboro Bay, with Rev. William Hills officiating. Burial will be at Royal Oak. Hayward's funeral home is in charge.

Do It Yourself

Textured Covering Solves Problems

By J. RALPH DALZELL

Readers who live in older houses and apartments are concerned about cracks and other blemishes in walls and ceiling plaster which paint and wallpaper cannot hide. Some readers are also desirous of insulating like areas against excessive sound and heat transfer.

A new wall and ceiling covering known as Curon combines a unique decorative finish with effective insulation properties. It is a richly textured, sponge soft, flexible material that lends itself to individual designs and color schemes. It controls sound, even from radio and TV, and creates appreciable quiet in a room. It keeps heat in during the winter and heat out during the summer. It can be dusted with a vacuum cleaner or washed with soap and water.

Picture 1 shows a portion of the material that has a striped surface. Picture 2 shows a plain surface. Both have a soft, plastic foam base. Both surface treatments can be secured in ten-inch square "tiles" or in rolls 24 inches wide. Ordinary wallpaper paste is used to apply the material to plaster or other clean surfaces.

In picture 3, ABCD represents one wall of a room. As shown, that ten-inch tile are to be applied, locate the vertical centre of the room, E.

Drop a chalked plumb line from E to the basement and then snap the line to create line EF. Locate the horizontal centre of room G, and get help to hold a chalked line from G to H. Test the level of the line using a carpenter's level. Then snap the line to create line GH. Next, use a long straightedge and chalk to draw vertical lines, starting at centre M, which are ten inches apart.

Be sure the lines are parallel to line EF. Also draw horizontal lines ten inches apart and parallel to line GH. In most cases, the last row of tile, J and K, will have to be cut somewhat smaller with a sharp knife. Sometimes the top row of tile, next to the ceiling will be cut to smaller sizes.

Use a brush to apply paste to the wall. Use plenty of paste so all areas are completely covered. Cover an area equal to about eight tile at a time. Start tile installation at M and finish one quarter of a wall at a time. Be sure the tile lines up with the guide lines. But the tiles closely together and press each into position using finger tips. When the tile has been cut, as in rows J and K, be careful to measure accurately so that the cut pieces will fit properly. Edges of the tile can be made to fit closely around the curved tops of baseboards or bottoms of picture molding by pressing the edges carefully into position and holding them there until they stick fast.

Curon is available at hardware and department stores. A helpful do-it-yourself kit that includes paste, knife, brush and other necessary tools is available.

Two-Hour Parking Opposed

Two former public works commissioners were over-ruled by the rest of city council when they opposed allowing two-hour parking on Herald between Government and Store and in two or three other downtown locations.

Ald. Arthur Dowell and Ald. M. H. Mooney both favored allowing only one-hour parking in the business district. "This two-hour parking is made to order for people who park all day," Ald. Dowell said. The all-day parkers, he said, moved their cars a few inches at coffee time, morning and afternoon.

Retirement Means Enjoyment

This column is one of a series prepared for the Colonist by the B.C. Medical Society. In each case the author is an authority in his field, and for professional reasons remains anonymous.

Retirement is something that should be planned for fully understood, and so arranged that it will be a period of enjoyment instead of emptiness, dissatisfaction and frustration. It is easy for all of us to

The days are too long, there is nothing to do. So we find ourselves asking the question: why should retirement be a terrible time for anyone?

PROPER PREPARATIONS
The answer lies in many directions, but chiefly in that of having made the proper preparations.

Most retirement, most men are reasonably comfortable in the "home" that is their business, their friends, and their ambitions. Working for almost everyone is a source of satisfaction. From this comes our first suggestion for a sensible retirement, and that is to have a plan for more work to do.

However, such a change can not be made on the day after your retirement starts. Of late we have come to realize that plans for retirement years are best made long ahead of time—even around the age of 40 or so. In this way, the coming retirement is something to look forward to a new way of life.

Canada had 172 cases of paralytic polio in 1957, compared with 209 in 1956.

'KERSPLAASH'

At Yellow Point we just spent a few days. Had a wonderful time... a lazy-laze; just drove the car under the trees. And left it there, for the sea & the breeze. The sun shone down, my skin to smote. As in my shorts, I sat on the float. Watching those kids, take off on the skis. Arms held high... bent in the knees. 'Twas a summer sight, as around they slewed. Towed by a "crew" in a gleaming Evinrude. And rule it was, in fact 'twas a brute. Some 35 horses under it's snout. Our daughters took-off, & seemed to soar. But the G.F. sed, "No."

& sat by the shore. Most everyone tried to get in the race. One doll kept smacking flat on her face. But everyone laughed out there in the sun. "YOU try Daddy... get in the fun. 'Ye-ah... c'mon Dad... don't be chicken." Sumptin' told me... I was in for a lick in a I looked at the G.F. got the family-frown. So I stepped in the skis, & sat me down. That hawser un-coiled in front of my nose. I was so scared... I guess I froze. "He" opened the throttle. I last saw my daughter. As I spread-eagled with a belly-full of water. I gasped to the surface, in quite some alarm.

"Cause 'he'd' yanked out a muscle in my right arm. They hoisted me back up on the float. As "Evin" fast-circled, back in his boat. The G.F. came aboard in a well-mannered rage. "That outa teach you," she earfulled. "TO ACT YOUR AGE."

Princess Slips Away

Like Ordinary Tourist She Saw Beauty Spots

Within hours of her arrival, tour to both relax and orientate in Victoria yesterday, Princess Margaret slipped away from the Royal suite in the Empress Hotel and took an unscheduled "rubbernecking" tour of local beauty spots.

Sitting on the special cushion from England, Her Royal Highness first drove to the new Government House, which is under construction, and then along Beach Drive, through the Uplands and up to Mount Tolmie.

The petite princess is believed to have specially requested the

Only a few startled residents noticed the princess on her quiet tour—much the same tour as is taken by thousands of tourists each year.

The grounds of Government House will be the scene Monday for the Lieutenant-Governor's Garden Party where Princess Margaret will meet some 4,000 persons.

Princess Margaret was accompanied on her drive yesterday by Lieutenant-Governor Frank Ross and Mrs. Ross.

Corporation of the Township of Esquimalt
BY-ELECTION JULY 31, 1956

(To fill the unexpired portion of the term of John E. Carey, deceased.)

PUBLIC NOTICE

IN HEREBY GIVEN in the Municipality of Esquimalt that I require the presence of the said electors at the Municipal Hall, 1229 Esquimalt Road, Esquimalt, B.C. on Monday, the 21st day of July, 1956, at the hour of ten o'clock in the forenoon, for the purpose of electing one person to represent them as:

COUNCILLOR For the period ending December 31st 1958 to fill the vacancy on the council caused by the death of John E. Carey.

The Mode of Nomination of Candidates Shall Be as Follows:
Candidates shall be nominated in writing by two duly qualified electors of the Municipality. The nomination paper shall be delivered to the Returning Officer at any time between the date of this notice and noon of the day of nomination. The nomination paper may be in the form prescribed in the "Municipal Act" and shall state the name, residence, and occupation of the person nominated in such manner as to sufficiently identify such candidate.

The nomination paper shall be subscribed to by the candidate.

In the event of a poll being necessary, such poll will be opened at Esquimalt on the 21st day of July, 1956, at the following place:

- (1) Municipal Hall, 1229 Esquimalt Road, for voters whose names appear in Section One of the Voters' List.
- (2) At 835 Craigflower Road, for voters whose names appear in Section Two of the Voters' List.

Such polling places shall be open from eight o'clock A.M. to eight o'clock P.M. at which every person is hereby required to take notice and govern himself accordingly.

GIVEN UNDER MY HAND AT Esquimalt, this 11th day of July, A.D. 1956.
